A public effort could bring Ride back: Council

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Local individuals and service clubs should get together to work on a bid to host Ride for Sight, Minden council said as it once again rejected any municipal involvement.

"I think other avenues should be explored," said Mike Maher, who along with Deputy-reeve Bern Berry and Councillor Bob Sisson voted against council's sponsorship of the Ride's return. "The ball shouldn't all be in Minden's fairgrounds."

The dissenting councillors, who were asked to overturn their decision Thursday night, are concerned about to village's ability to accommodate the 8,000 motorcycle riders in one area. Because there is a lot of alcohol consumption — which not all were in agreement with — they felt the area didn't have enough security resources.

"What is wrong with putting our heads together and having them explore using private property," asked Berry, who suggested municipal facilities, such as the arena, could be rented to hold events.

Working together is exactly what Michael Homestead suggested when he opened the meeting by asking council to re-consider its decision. He brought along petitions with approximately 400 names in support of the Ride.

"The whole process was pushed too fast," says Homestead, an owner of the Schnitzel House. "The public should have been given more voice."

Instead, the debate focused on negative things and personality con-

Attendants want to avert looming strike

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Haliburton County ambulance crews are hopeful that a contract can be worked out before a strike is necessary, their union shop steward says.

"I'm very optimistic that a deal can be made," says Ian Douglas.

At a meeting last week in Lindsay, talks between union and Anson, Hindon and Minden council representatives apparently did not bring the two sides closer to signing a contract.

The ambulance crews are asking for a 35 per cent salary increase, from $12.40 an hour to $16.80 an hour.

Douglas says they want their wages to match what other Ontario ambulance attendants make.

He said that Haliburton County's service is one of two ambulance services left in Ontario that is still run as part of a municipality. With the exception of Wasaga Beach, all others are run as employees of the Crown.

"We are fighting for the right to become civil servants," he said.

The employees are part of the Ontario Public Service Employee Union (OPSEU). Therefore, they have the right to strike but not to negotiate their own contracts.

The Haliburton County ambulance service has been attempting to agree on a contract since last winter.

Douglas said that 100 per cent of funding for the ambulance comes from the Ministry of Health, not from county taxpayers.

However, costs for the ambulance service is included in the municipality's yearly budget. Funding comes from the provincial government. It raises the money through taxation.

Reeve Ray Moore said that at this point the strike scenario is still "hypothetical".

"We thought we did our best for the service," he said. "It was our hope to establish a contract for them, since they never have had one and be able to negotiate it year after year."

He said that he didn't know what the outcome would be. "We are not professional negotiators. We are just ordinary guys."

CREATIVE CARVERS!

Prize pumpkins...

Fearsome faces: The challenge of carving the scariest face on a pumpkin within a 10 minute time limit attracted several teams of competitors to the Haliburton high school gymnasium on Friday. These fellows didn't win, but their jack-o-lantern was probably the most gruesome. Anthony Mestroni, left, accidentally cut his finger during the frantic competition, and dripped some of his blood onto the pumpkin visage before heading off to get a bandage. Helping him in the effort were Joshua Miller, Richard Chapple and James Simmons.

Canada Post cuts staffing on Saturdays

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

People who live in small towns should no longer expect any mail in their boxes on Saturdays, says Canada Post's manager of media relations.

"If we want to not go back in the red, we cannot stay open in a small town because there's one person who needs mail on Saturday," says Laszlo Szabo in a telephone interview.

Until recently, mail was sorted on Saturday morning. Now, with only one person working, most of her time must be spent at the counter. Priority mail, such as Priority Post and pension cheques, are still sorted.

The staff cutbacks — in every rural post office across Canada — are part of Canada Post's piling down of services in order to show a profit at the end of the year.

"We've come from having a $600-million deficit" to making a profit, Szabo says. "That's the whole thrust of Canada Post coming from a department which had no sense of the bottom line to a business-like organization. This is part of streamlining hours of operation."

It costs $45 to have one staff person work one hour, Szabo says. "If we're opening 8,000 offices for five hours more a week," the corporation will quickly have a deficit again.

Most Canadians never have had their mail sorted on Saturdays, he added. When questioned about the fact that many of those people get home delivery, a service people in

SECRETS OF SUCCESS: The riding's MP for 25 years, Bill Scott returned some of the praise that was coming his way Saturday in Lindsay as hundreds gathered to recognize his many years of commitment to constituents.

Man of the people celebrates 25 years

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

After 25 years of doing what he can for people, the people certainly came out to thank Bill Scott, one of the country's longest-standing Members of Parliament.

Hundreds of Scott's Victoria-Haliburton constituents arrived at the Admiral Inn in Lindsay to honour the man who has been serving their interests these past 25 years.

Some prominent politicians dropped by as well.

"Bill Scott has been a great Member of Parliament," says Finance Minister Michael Wilson.

"He has come to office with one thing in mind — to serve the people of his riding, which he has done faithfully and conscientiously."

"People over the years and asked for assistance, maybe for help with a tax problem," says the man who has a few tax problems himself. "Bill Scott has always been there."

In a recent Toronto Star column, Carol Goar wrote that the Progressive Conservatives might do better in the polls if there were more politicians with Scott's popularity back in the riding. "What Carol

'He came to office with one thing in mind - to serve the people of his riding,' says the nation's finance minister.

Goar was saying," says Wilson, "is the constituents know how well their Member of Parliament serves them. If they know he's there, they'll give him support."

"He's a real constituency person," says Bill Vankoughnet, 12-year MP for Hastings-Frontenac-Lennox and Addington. "He's very sincere, the kind of person I'm proud to be associated with. Politics does not always carry the respect I think it should have" and Scott restores many people's respect.

"I don't think there's anyone who has served the riding better," says former MPP John Eakins, who, milling about the crowd of Conservatives, remarks "I'm as much at home here as Bill Scott."

Scott's strength has been "understanding the people and being able to translate their views to his government," Eakins says. And when representing all the people of Victoria-Haliburton, party lines are broken.

"When the election is over, you put the partisanship aside," Eakins says.

"I think the big thing is being a people person," Scott's political rival says.

"He'll always say hello and not shun people," says Bruce Glass, the Liberal candidate in the past two federal elections. "He's just genuinely interested in people and that's the big thing."

That contact with constituents will always be important, especially as its absence is resented in other politicians. "People are frustrated," Glass said, and they showed this frustration in the last provincial election by turning out David Peterson's ruling Liberals. "They don't think anyone in a position of power will listen to them."

Yet politicians need to do more than listen to the people, and Scott

Councils in a racket over noise by-laws

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Noise by-laws in Haliburton County could be more effective if citizens who complain about disturbances would testify in court, local officials say.

"The public wants us to handle it," said Elaine McCrea, assistant by-law enforcement officer for Anson, Hindon and Minden. "When it comes right down to it, they won't go to court."

Her municipality is one of four in the county which has a noise by-law. Under Minden's by-law, any loud noises, such as horns and shouting, are prohibited from midnight to 7 a.m. The maximum penalty is a fine of $2000 — provided the complaint makes it into a courtroom. McCrea says this has never happened in her municipality.

"The problem usually corrects itself," she says. The common procedure involves making one phone call to the person responsible, informing them that a complaint has been lodged.

"When you ask people to keep it down, nine times out of ten they will comply," said OPP Constable Mike Maybee.

Const. Maybee said although the

'What is disturbing to a person who is 70 years old may not disturb a teenager.'

OPP does not enforce municipal by-laws, they will be asked to step in if the by-law officer is unavailable.

"Noise by-laws do work," he said, "but a law is only good as it is enforced."

Handing out warnings does the trick, but sooner or later the person complaining may have to testify in court against the person making the noise. This is where noise by-laws run into trouble.

"When it comes right down to the nitty gritty, the people who complain don't want to go to court," says Stanhope By-law Officer Jim Moore.

Stanhope has had a noise by-law since 1978. Like Minden, it prohibits the sounding of bells, horns and sirens when it is unnecessary. The same $2000 fine applies, but unlike the latter's by-law, there is no set time period in which the noise must occur.

Since first instituting the by-law, Moore can recall one case which went to court. It involved barking dogs, and the dogs' owner had to pay a small fine for lying on the witness stand.

Moore says that the biggest difficulty with enforcing a noise by-law is deciphering what exactly a loud noise is.

"What is disturbing to a person who is 70 years old, may not disturb a teenager," he said.

The thought of having to enforce a noise by-law has posed too much of a problem for six townships in the county, and they have rejected the idea of having one.

As an example, earlier this month Lutterworth council rejected a similar noise by-law to Minden's. Councillors found the rules too vague and pushed it aside.

To date, the four townships which have a noise by-law include Anson, Hindon and Minden, Stanhope, Dysart et al and Sherbourne et al.

All four are very similar in that they have a maximum $2000 fine attached to a conviction. In Dysart, there is minimum $100 fine. Any additional costs can be recovered under the provisions of the Provincial Offences Act.

ANXIOUS TO BEGIN: After spending months waiting to hear if their proposal was accepted, Gena Robertson and Barb Fraser are now anxious about moving the new adult mental health centre into an office complex which is being built below SkySlider, across from the fire hall.

Woman charged after money is missed in Dorset

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

A Minden-area woman has been charged with theft over $1000 after her employer discovered money was missing.

The owner of the Hollow Valley Restaurant, Kel Stone, said the woman had worked for his restaurant for the last four years.

"We had noticed as late as last year our food costs were getting high," he said.

Stone said he implemented several programs at his Dorset restaurant to try and find out why costs were rising, but nothing worked.

"We realized that the problem was not in the store room, but in the till. I was looking at the wrong end of the scale."

Stone checked over his books and when he had gathered enough evidence, he contacted the OPP.

After launching a lengthy investigation, which included video surveillance of the suspect, the OPP made an arrest.

The accused will appear in Provincial Court in Minden on December 7 to answer the charge.

Stone would not disclose exactly how much money was stolen but said in the ten years that he has been in business, this was the most money that taken.

Echo hopes to sort out delivery woes

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Canada Post is sending a representative to The Echo office to see if anything can be done to speed up newspaper delivery.

Ever since the sorting station was switched from Peterborough to Lindsay, the Echo office has received almost a letter or phone call a day from people complaining about late delivery. A paper used to reach Kirkfield, for instance, on the Friday. Now it doesn't arrive until the following Wednesday.

More than 5,000 copies of The Echo usually arrive back at the office by eight o'clock Wednesday morning. (The paper is printed in Bracebridge.) Echo staff labels, bundles and bags the newspapers here. Local mail usually reaches the Haliburton post office by 10 o'clock. Other newspapers are sorted and bagged according to their destination. Because of numbers, places such as Cobocok, Lindsay and Toronto get their own bags. All other papers are bundled and sent in Peterborough Forward bags. Bags are then sorted in Peterborough. All newspapers are Second Class mail.

(Some mail follows a seemingly convoluted route. Cardiff newspapers go to Peterborough, then Bancroft and then Cardiff. The Kirkfield papers go to Peterborough, then Lindsay, then Kirkfield. If people regularly drive to some of the outlying villages — Wilberforce, Gooderham, Dorset — and are willing to deliver the newspapers, please contact The Echo office.)

Once the newspapers leave our office, we have no control over their delivery. However, there may be things we can do as we bag the newspapers which will speed up the process. As well, in a few weeks, we will be putting The Echo into individual paper bags. This will also help ensure all sections of the paper are received.

Mental health centre gets funding

by MARTHA PERKINS
Editor

Haliburton County will soon have its first adult mental health counselling centre.

The Ministry of Health has approved spending $130,000 on hiring one full-time and one part-time counsellor as well as a part-time office worker.

Overseeing the "generic" clinic — various types of counselling will be available for such things as mental illness, depression, stress, marriage breakdown, family violence — is the Supportive Initiative for Residents in the County of Haliburton, SIRCH.

"Our original funding proposal was for $400,000 so this is a drastic cut and does not address the type of services we wanted," says Barb Fraser, SIRCH's chairperson. They had hoped to hire an administrator, therapist/social worker and office worker. To fill any gaps, SIRCH has allowed for sessional fees to pay for outside specialists.

Because the ministry won't let the project begin until all the paperwork and policies are in place, SIRCH has hired Gena Robertson for 10 hours a week to set the new office up.

"The need for adult mental health counselling was evident," says Robertson, who as a member of the Haliburton Social Action Committee, made the application for funds. (SIRCH wasn't established at the time of application, but it is now the centre's management board.) Until now, most people needing counselling had to go out of the county.

"It made (receiving help) extremely difficult for people who work, especially if they have children and have to arrange for sitters or take the children out of school."

"There was also a motivational problem," Fraser adds. "You may not feel like making a one-and-a-half hour trip to Peterborough. To go once a week for eight weeks is a major commitment."

The Bancroft adult mental health clinic is now helping 40 Haliburton County residents, most of whom are also fulfills this part of his role, Glass says. "You can't go through an election without discussing the issues. You can't just toe the party line. Bill understands the issues and is prepared to discuss them."

Scott's won 8 elections

"But the strength is relating to people. That gets you through the door."

Politics, however, does have a price to say in the Member's personal life. Weekdays are spent in Ottawa without family, who are back in Kilmount literally minding the store. (Bill and Betty Scott own Kilmount IGA and Home Hardware, which are managed by their son and local historian, Guy.)

Laurie Scott was only two when her father was first elected in 1965, just before Trudeaumania, so "I don't know anything different."

When asked why she thinks her father has been so popular through eight elections, Laurie says "he just genuinely loves people. The house is always full of people, the phone never stops ringing, he never turns anyone away, he never loses his patience."

Does she think he'll ever retire? "He has more energy than I could think of having," she laughs. "I once went with him for a week campaigning and I thought that was all I can handle."

If he is tired, her father never lets it show. "He always tries to do his best. He's given a lot to everyone in small ways, although he'd never boast about it. And he treats everyone the same, whether they're big business or someone who needs unemployment insurance."

Laurie then turns the direction towards her mother, who has a

'He always tries to do his best. He's given a lot to everyone in small ways.'

greeting line of her own. "She's worked a lot of years and doesn't get the credit she deserves, running the store, raising a family..."

"The first years were really enjoyable," Betty Scott says during a pause in the festivities. "We were new and fresh and knew what to expect. The last years have been harder though. You do feel like having a rest but you still have home fires to keep burning."

But she doesn't begrudge her husband's service to the riding. "I knew that Bill really loved to go to Ottawa and the work had to be done. So I just took over with the business and the children."

"We had to give up a lot but it was worth it."

She too is asked will her husband ever retire? "There's just something in him that drives him on."

"I never think about retiring," says Saturday's man of honour. "Life is very full for me."

Looking back on his two-and-a-half decades in the House of Commons, Scott says "there were some pretty exciting times." Diefenbaker's parting, Trudeau's flamboyant arrival, the FLQ Crisis. "They were very colourful years... I mixed with all different parties and have good friends on all sides. You get a broader focus."

After sitting on the Opposition for so many years, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney's success also brought about an exciting new time as MP.

"You play a different role," Scott says of the transition. "Your activities increase, and you have more responsibilities."

Yet through it all, Scott was always known to be on hand at a special anniversary or birthday. The amount of ribbon he's cut could probably stretch from sea to sea.

"You need someplace where people can reach levels of government," he says. He sees his role as "talking to people, mixing with people. It's important you get their feelings. And probably you can do something for them."

In a speech earlier that afternoon (there were also celebrations that night), Scott said "a politician's life is not all easy. But don't be afraid. A kind word goes a long way."

He then thanked many of the people who have helped him in his career — his family, his office staff and his supporters. As he acknowledged people, his skills as a "people person" were obvious. "There's Rod. I used to cut Rod's hair. Stand up and show them how well it's grown back in... It's been great over the years. Gladly pinched hit for me. I see Judy and Diane. Who else have I got from Ottawa?"

There were a lot of hands to shake, and a lot of congratulations to acknowledge. But as he moved through the large crowd, clasping shoulders, calling people by names and reminiscing, the Member of Parliament once more illustrated that that's what Bill Scott is all about.

IN THE PUMPKIN PATCH: This Piper Seminol "ran out of runway" at the Stanhope Airport on Saturday and ended up in Barb and Wayne Fawcett's field. The pilot and two passengers, up from Toronto on a scenic tour, were uninjured, but it's unlikely the plane will ever fly again. Police estimate damages to be $200,000.

Crash passengers not hurt

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

Hallowe'en came a bit early for a pilot and two passengers when their plane overshot the Stanhope runway and landed near a pumpkin patch.

"The runway ran out," says Joanne Schneider, who along with Robert Spurrier and pilot David Brooks, was unhurt in Saturday's accident. "No bruises, no bumps."

The rented Piper Seminol didn't fare as well. Parts of its underbody lay strewn along Wayne and Barb Fawcett's potato field. Its wings almost touching the nearby pumpkins, the plane didn't look as if it would add any more kilometres on its engine. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

The Toronto trio had left Buttonville Airport earlier that morning on a sight-seeing tour. Airport manager Mike Carey watched as the plane touched down. When it was evident the plane would not stop before the runway did, Carey said it appeared the pilot "thought he'd pull up and add full power" to take off again. "But when he decided to pull up, he was off the runway."

The plane broke through the wire fence, crossed Airport Road and "belly flopped" on the Fawcett's field. It slid across the field and turned as it settled into the soft earth.

"When he hit the fence, I ran over to see if anyone was injured," says Carey, who adds there will be an investigation of the accident.

This is the second time in two years that a plane has had a botched landing at Stanhope airport. In the summer of 1988, a plane crashed into the trees north of the airport building.

Nancy Bussey, who lives next door to the Fawcetts', hopes her property won't be next.

"I came home and when I saw the plane in the field, I knew it wasn't there this morning," she says. "Then I came over and I knew it was too close to the ground" to be there on purpose.

Police arrest 3 youths for thefts

by BRIAN RODNICK

Staff Reporter

Three area men have been arrested for break-ins committed during an almost two-month-long crime spree throughout Haliburton.

The men, an 18 year-old, 20 year-old and one young offender, are accused of committing several break-ins, four of which resulted in the theft of two trucks and a car.

The crime spree began sometime between August 15 and September 22 with a break-in of a Haliburton Lake cottage.

This was followed with a rash of break-ins at two Haliburton car dealers.

On September 28, a 1989 Chevrolet Cavalier was stolen from Curry Motors body shop. The vehicle was returned a few hours later with damages estimated over $1000.

Then on October 10, a break-in occurred at Elstone Motors. Thieves drove off in 1989 Dodge Dakota and a 1990 Ram. During the evening, both trucks were wrecked and abandoned.

It is estimated that over $50,000 of damage was done to the two vehicles.

Police allege the thieves also broke into Duchene's Service Centre in West Guilford and stole at least $400 worth of cigarettes, soft drinks and chips.

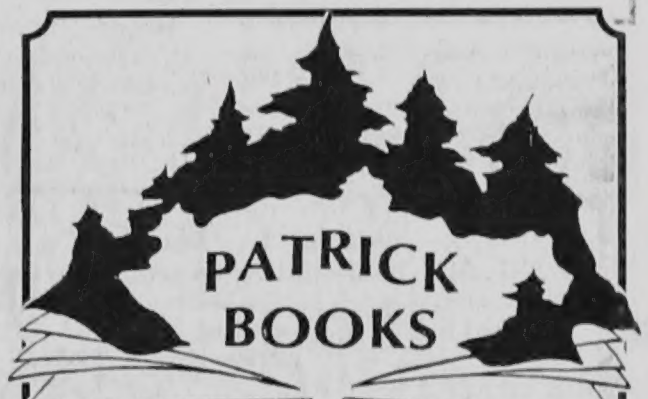

The three men are in custody and appeared in a Lindsay courtroom yesterday. The young offender appeared in Young Offender Court.

Warden thanked for a hard year at the county's helm

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Municipal officials from across the county got together Saturday night at a banquet in Dorset to say thank you to Donald Shortreed for his term as County Warden.

"It's kind of an overwhelming night," said Shortreed in his address to the 100 or so people gathered in the Dorset Community Centre. He thanked his staff and fellow Sherborne et al councillors who gave their support over the last year.

Shortreed also gave a special thank-you to Chief Administrative Officer, Gary McKnight, and former Dysart reeve Murray Fearrey for inspiring him.

Shortreed then introduced his family and thanked them for standing by him during his year of added responsibilities. In a special tribute, Shortreed's daughter Allison acknowledged the work that her father accomplished as Warden.

In a lighter moment, she presented him with a package of his favorite cookies, explaining that he had been too nervous to eat his dessert following the meal.

Emcee for the evening, Stanhope Reeve Harry Davis, presented Marlene Shortreed with a bouquet of red roses, and thanked her for the help she has provided this year as well.

"This has been a rewarding and interesting year," said Mrs. Shortreed. But now her husband — who would fly his plane to events — could use a rest. "Maybe next year we can take a trip?" she said, turning to him.

Also on hand to express their thanks and support were MPP Dennis Drainville, and former MPP John Eakins.

Eakins spoke first, joking with Drainville that he was glad that Drainville's phone would be the one ringing off the wall now and not his.

He then thanked Shortreed for his year's efforts. "Tonight gives us the opportunity to say thank you for your time. We all have to work together for the benefit of our county and province."

This sentiment was also expressed by Drainville. "We don't do any job in politics alone," he said. "We are always surrounded by the support of our community."

Drainville then paid a tribute to John Eakins. "He has given me a standard to follow as a member of parliament."

In their addresses, both Davis and Shortreed reminded Drainville of the need for a 18 bed chronic care facility in the county.

"I know every other man will be out there with his hand out," said Shortreed, "but if we work together in a team effort, we can accomplish a lot."

"Dennis Drainville has a real big job ahead of him."

The MPP acknowledged the need for the beds and assured the audience that negotiations were already under way.

"I really only made one campaign promise and that was to do everything I could to make the 18 chronic care beds in Haliburton County."

"Don has worked very hard for you, both in and out of the county," said Hastings Warden Bruce Davis. "He has worked within no set boundaries."

BASKING IN THE LIMELIGHT: Saturday night was a time of praise and accolades as Warden Donald Shortreed, here with his wife Marlene, was thanked and gave thanks at the Warden's Banquet in Dorset.

Carnival coming back!

Haliburton's Business Improvement Area Association hopes to inject a little bit of life back into winter this February by reviving Haliburton's Winter Carnival. The carnival has not been held in the past three years, but the BIA thinks the time is right to bring it back. Members reason that everyone can benefit from a little old fashioned fun and community spirit in the heart of winter, especially in 1991, with talk of a recession and the painful blight of the GST.

A BIA committee chaired by Walt McKechnie and Sylvia Holland is organizing the carnival, and last week it met with representatives of community organizations and service clubs to gauge support for a carnival. The response was overwhelmingly positive, and work on the carnival agenda has begun.

Among the events being considered or already committed for the carnival, to be held February 15, 16 and 17, are an NHL Oldtimers hockey game, a casino night, a bonspiel, outdoor skating and a bonfire, a torchlight parade, cross country ski races, snow sculpture competition, lumberjack events, a pancake breakfast, a Rotary hockey tournament, a snowmobile poker run, sleigh rides, a dance, special lunches and dinners, a figure skating carnival, and outdoor games and competitions for children and adults.

The BIA organizing committee hopes to get as many local people and organizations involved as possible, and is looking for more ideas on how to make the carnival a success. If you or your group would like to participate, or if you have any suggestions about what should be included in the carnival, contact Walt McKechnie or Sylvia Holland as soon as possible.

Cleanup a key issue in SSFC request

The board of education has deferred a decision on whether or not Sir Sandford Fleming College can use the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School for an extra week of summer classes.

Business Administrator Jim Bradley said at last Tuesday's meeting that the request should be rejected because custodians say they need that extra week to get the school ready for high school classes. This led to a very heated debate.

"It doesn't hurt custodians to work a little harder," said trustee

Leroy Eager. "We might be better to bring in outside help. Contractors could do it in less time."

"I hardly think so," replied Bradley.

Sir Sandford is asking for a week's extension, so School of Fine Arts courses could run over six weeks instead of five.

However, this would mean HHSS custodians would have only two weeks to prepare the school for Labour Day. All the desks and floors have to be cleaned, and there are odd painting jobs.

"I'm not suggesting that it can't be done," said Bradley, "but it would be considerably costly."

To clean-up in two weeks the custodians would have to work a lot of over time, and even this may not be enough.

"I don't think we can do it," said Bradley. "It takes a week to wax the gym floor alone."

As trustees threw in their opinions, a list of possible solutions was compiled. One suggestion included dividing Sir Sandford's classes and having some of them held next door at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School.

"It seems to me that we are trying to load it all into one school," said Superintendent Dale Robinson. "Why not share it with JDHS and take some of the pressure off the high school?"

This idea was turned down once before because most of JDHS's classrooms are carpeted and some of the courses can be messy. Robinson added that not every class of Sir Sandfords could damage the carpet.

But college director Barb Bolin said that JDHS was too small to accommodate the 750 summer students and 100 teachers, should the need arise for them to gather in one group.

She suggested alternating the location of classes at HHSS so custodians could clean one area while another is being used.

But Bradley said this would be impossible. "Virtually the whole school is consumed with the care staff we have."

Another problem was added when Director of Education Stuart Baker said parents new to the area want tour the school before classes begin. Baker wants to have the school all cleaned up to give the best impression.

BOE debates funding university trip

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

High school students will get a taste of university life — if the board of education will allocate $3000.

The fifteen students, all part of HHSS's enrichment class, have been invited to take part in a five-day course at Queen's University.

The students would mingle among enrichment students from all over Ontario, ranging from Grades 8 to 12. They would attend entry level university classes, taught by professors and get a chance to experience what university life has to offer.

The trip is being organized by HHSS teacher Bob Penfold who made a presentation before the board Tuesday night asking for funding.

"When you put students together (Grades 8 to 12) with their intellectual peers, they blossom," said Penfold.

He added that when the program began five years ago, many of the professors at Queen's were skeptical. "Now most of the professors are very excited about it."

It would cost $75 per student for the course and $125 each to stay in residence. Penfold suggested that the $3000 fee could also be shared with parents, if the board could not allocate the funds.

"This is a good program," said Chairman Len Salvatori. He suggested that they come up with more questions and let Penfold know what they decide later.

Penfold said that a $5 registration fee per student was needed by early next month and that he must hear back from the board no later than November 2nd.

THIS WEEK

ENOUGH WAS ENOUGH. This was the third time her husband was playing a deadly game of cat and mouse as she sped down the Queen Elizabeth Way. Once again, her husband's car had suddenly appeared in her rear view mirror. Knowing what to expect, her heart dropped. She'd slow down, he'd slow down. She'd speed up and try to change lanes, he'd speed up and block her. Then he tried to ram her into the guard rails.

After 10 years of physical and psychological abuse, something deep inside clicked. Her fear turned to anger as quickly as the cars whizzed past.

"I just got downright mad," Jean says, her voice reflecting that flash of anger more than a decade earlier. "I go, you go, I don't care who goes — you're not going to do this to me any more."

Jean jerked her steering wheel. But instead of motioning the car to go towards the shoulder, she aimed it in her husband's direction. It was his turn to grasp the steering wheel in fright.

He no longer had control over her. She never saw him again.

Jean wants to keep it that way so has asked that her real name not be used. Her husband will be called Al.

They met when Jean was 21 and he was 24. When he came over for dinner, he was insistent on helping her: "Let me help you do the dishes... What can I do for you," he'd fawn.

However, he was equally insistent that they marry. Jean held back because she didn't think she was ready. Not one to give up, he bought the ring and booked the church — before she had even said yes. Then it was too hard to say no. "I thought 'If I let a guy like this go... I probably couldn't do any better than this.'"

After the wedding, Al's Dr. Jekyll turned into Mr. Hyde. Now he'd yell at her to do the housework and prepare meals. "That's your work, that's women's work," he'd say. "I'm the man, I'm supposed to making the money."

Problem was, he was never any good at making money. A graphic artist, he was always full of grandiose dreams and would never work for someone else. In their 10 years of marriage, he earned only $33,000. Meanwhile, Jean started one job at seven in the morning, worked till 2:30, started her second job at 3, and began making her way home at 11 that night.

Along with his he-man tirades, Al's abuse included more than words. "If he got mad, he'd bang his fist against something. There were a few holes in the

Taking Back Control...

As her husband tried to ram her off the road, Jean decided it was time for the violence to end. After 10 years of physical and emotional violence, it was time to leave and rebuild her sense of self.

doors and one day he broke his steering wheel. After a while, it just got that he was throwing stuff at me, too. He actually scared me, because I wasn't used to that."

Jean's parents had separated when she was a teenager, but it wasn't acrimonious, and "there was not constant arguing back and forth." This was fighting in a way she wasn't accustomed to. To settle her nerves, she started taking Valium. Eventually she was taking five a day.

Although she was frightened of his anger, she soon got to be frightened of him as well. Fear then became all-consuming. "It suddenly creeps up on you. You realize 'I'm scared.'"

One such time was when he had her in a head lock and was beating her head with his fist. She was trying to pull herself away, and between the two actions, several vertebrae in her neck were broken.

At the hospital, he threatened her not to tell anyone what had really happened. Instead, Al said, tell them we were kibitzing around and got too rough. "I had to act like 'Ha, ha, we were wrestling.' At that point I was really scared of him — I was scared to open my mouth."

Another time was when he was dragging her down the hall by the arm. A visit to the hospital was again necessary because of all the torn ligaments. She bluffed her way through this time as well, although deep in her heart she was yearning for someone to ask her husband "How did this really happen?"

Why didn't she leave him then?

"It's really hard to describe. You don't trust them and you don't trust yourself. You lose your confidence about things. You'd rather keep quiet and keep everything inside, which is bad."

When she did tell people, reaction was mixed. A friend told her to get out. A priest told her to "hang in there if you can, and to see if I could talk him into coming in" to talk with the priest. ("There was only one time Al broke down and cried and said he needed help." The next day, when she had arranged help for him, he said she had dreamt the whole thing up.)

Al's sister told her a bit about Al's youth. His parents were always fighting, explosive, angry arguments which often drove the father out of the house. Young Al would crawl into his mother's bed and sleep with her. His mother pampered him, he could do no wrong. For some strange reason, even in the heat of summer Al would never take his socks off in bed, Jean remembers. He said he would get sore ankles if he did. Try finding some meaning in that psychological tidbit; Jean can't.

Jean realized that his kindness during courtship was all a front, and her hesitancy to marry him was a recognition of that. Today, she's much more sensitive to people who "are not really what they appear."

It must also be remembered that through these years, Jean was carrying two full-time jobs, was terrified of coming home at night, and couldn't sleep when she was home.

"There was always the fear that the violence could happen at any time. I was afraid to say 'How was your day, dear?' in case it wasn't a good day. You wouldn't know what kind of mood he was in."

Exhausted, her defenses were also broken down by his verbal abuse.

"You get to the point where you think it's your fault, you should be working harder to solve the problem. I didn't have enough confidence in myself. After a while, you begin to believe you're 'an ugly-looking bitch.' He was always right and I was always wrong. It was always my fault. These people, they just wear you down, you can't take any more."

What made Jean say "no more" was her husband's purchase of a gun. The front door of their apartment had three locks on it; the bedroom door had another lock on it. For "security", her husband insisted on keeping the rifle in the bedroom with them. Once, during an argument, he waved it at her. Jean realized that if she stayed with Al, one day she'd be dead.

"You wonder where their breaking point is. I thought something terrible was going to happen and he'd snap."

"I snuck off to the lawyer's and asked her advice. She planned it with me to get a restraining order but until I got that, I wasn't to say anything."

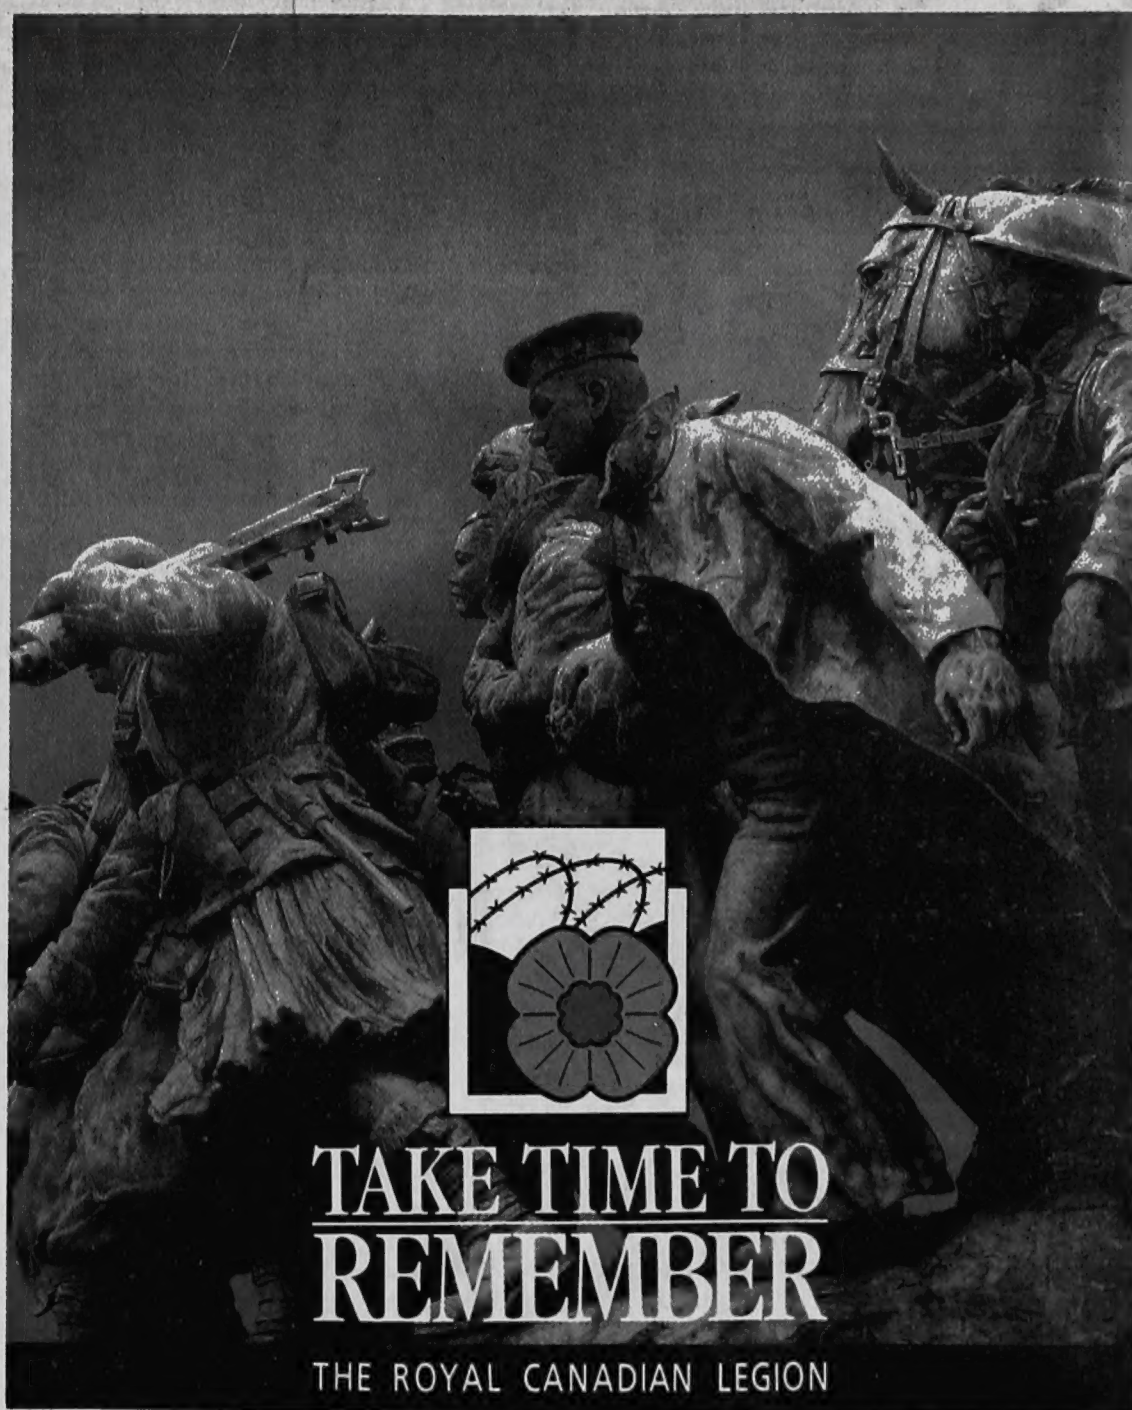

"I was really scared at that point because I didn't know how he'd react. Once he did come to my mother's and pounded at the door. I just yelled at him that I was going to call the police."

In a couple of days, which seemed like an eternity to her, the restraining order forbidding her husband to contact her at work or at home was ready.

It was still a fearful Jean who finally left her husband — "I think I popped a few extra Valiums." Restraining order or not, past experiences had taught her that Al didn't have much respect for the law: One night as they sped down the highway, a police cruiser pulled up behind them, lights flashing. Al put his foot on the gas. Speeds reached 120, 140 miles per hour. "That was just him," she says of his response. She was imagining death. "We went over some train tracks and a train was coming." They whizzed past; the police had to brake and the chase was over. It only looks fun in the movies.

As she suspected, leaving her husband did not mean the violence would end. It was a real-life horror movie those three times her husband waited for her to get off work so he could chase her down the QEW. After the first time, she didn't see him for a few weeks. But he came back. "I guess he just

by JEREMY ROBERTS, 4A

NOVEMBER THE 11th is a very special day that we must remember because that was the day one of the greatest wars ended. This was World War I. Did you know that more than 60,000 Canadians died fighting for our country? That was quite a lot. Would you like to pay that price?

When World War I was over, one soldier said "It sure felt good to stand up and watch a sunset without getting shot at." When the war ended there was a lot of celebrating. It was a time to be glad and a time to be sad. At the hearing of the end of the war it was in the headlines all over the country.

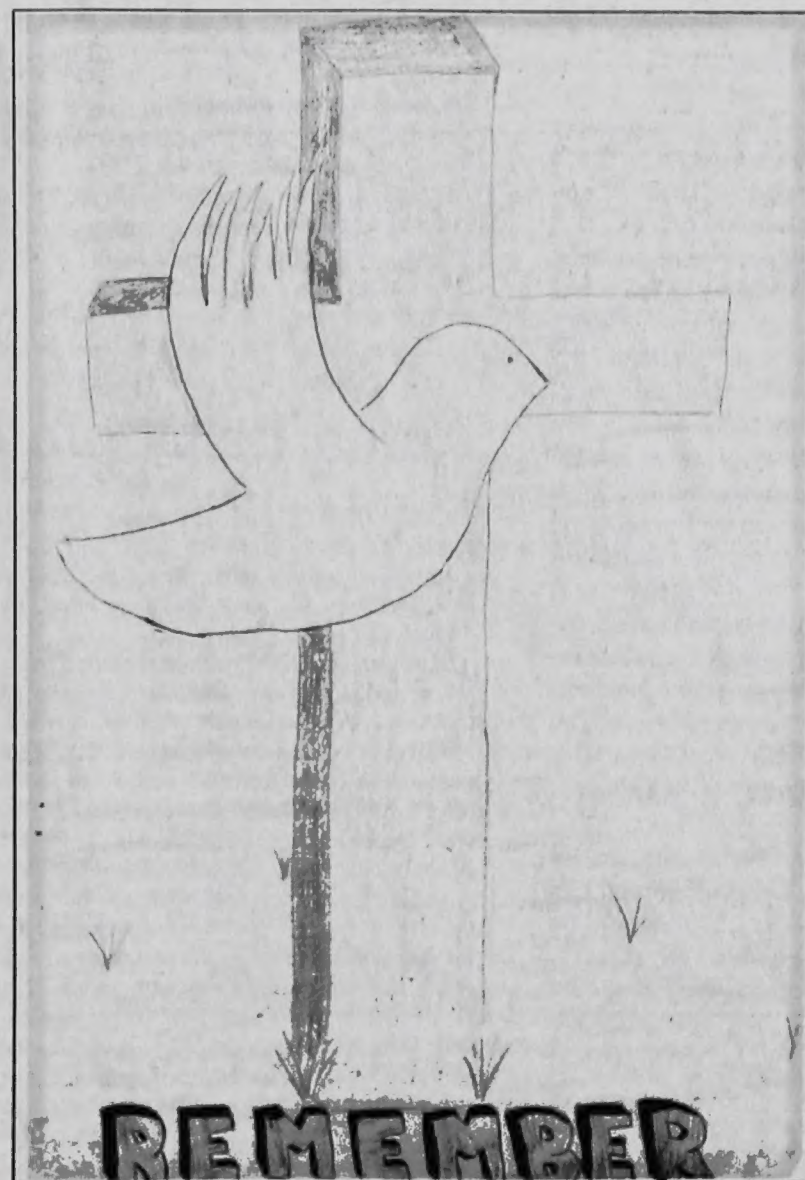

World War I's nickname was 'the war to end all wars'. The reason we have to remember is because of the soldiers who died so that we could enjoy our freedom.

One of the most popular symbols for Remembrance Day is the blood-red poppy. There are others too, such as the white crosses above the soldier's graves in Flanders Fields in France.

My grandfather fought in World War II. He used to take food and supplies to the front lines on mules. He had to lead mules through mine trails and drive supply trucks. My grandfather doesn't like to talk about the war because it brings back sad memories. If it wasn't for those brave men and women like my grandfather, we wouldn't have many of the freedoms we have now.

World War II (which began 21 years after World War I) happened because Hitler and his German army, along with the Italian and Japanese armies, gradually started to take over Europe. What was to be the war to end wars didn't turn out to be that way at all because again the whole world was fighting. At first, Hitler was looking pretty good. Finally his luck ran out. He was defeated. After Germany was defeated the Americans dropped an A-Bomb on Japan, and that ended World War II.

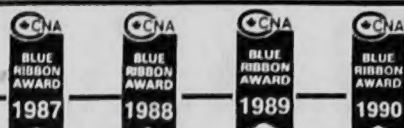

I wear a poppy on Remembrance Day to help me to remember the soldiers who died in both wars. Do you wear a poppy on Remembrance Day?

Small-town rights

At a recent Freedom of Information seminar, the province's lawyer from Toronto hoped the seminar would finish early so everyone could take a walk outside. Through the windows she could see the quiet lake, the leaves falling on the winding roads, the beckoning forests. She saw nature and a chance to escape. Everyone else saw Haliburton the way it always looked. What's all the fuss about outdoor walks? When the seminar ended, the locals gave the outdoors a cursory glance as they got into their cars and drove home.

Sometimes we forget to appreciate why we call Haliburton County home. We take for granted all those things which made us choose to live here. It takes someone from the city to jolt us back into the realization that what we have here is special. Small towns, especially small towns surrounded by so much natural beauty, offer a quality of lifestyle. The quantity of opportunities is sometimes limited, but that's often a small price to pay for the tranquility, sense of community, and slower way of life.

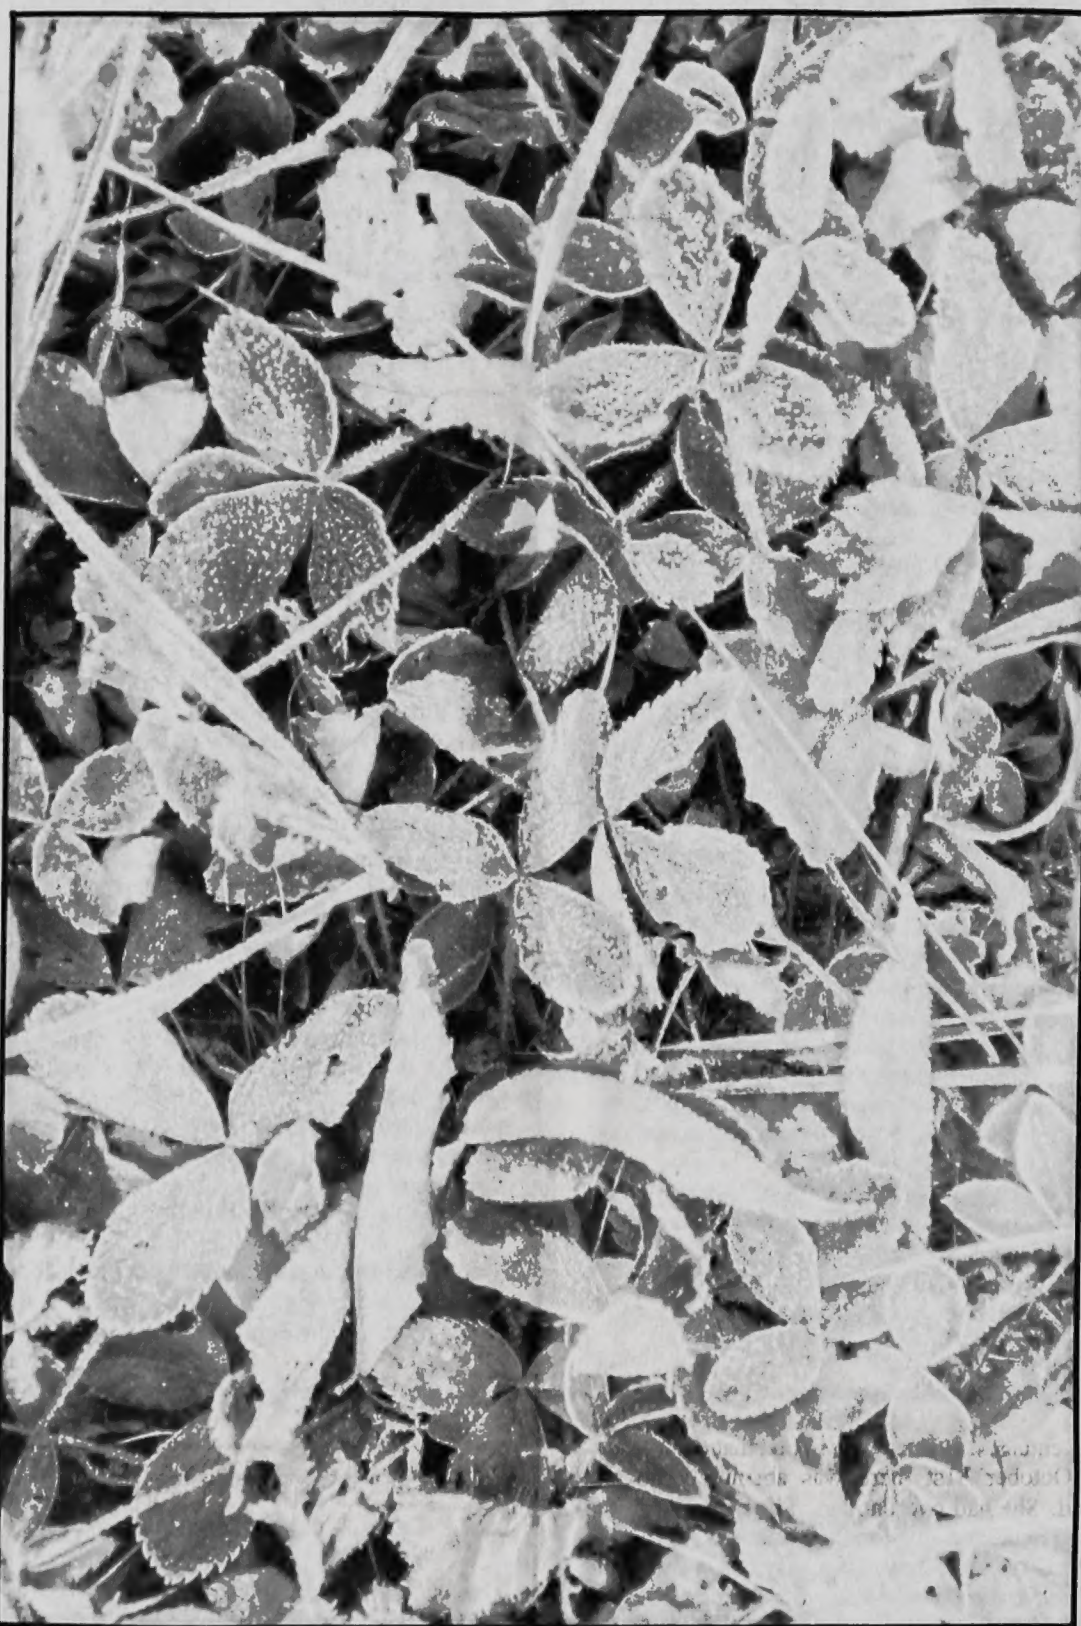

However, just because we admit we like to live here doesn't mean we should have to give up all of the services available in the city. Much of the malaise in the last provincial election sprung from the feeling that rural Ontario was getting pushed aside by Toronto interests. Millions upon millions of dollars seemed to be spent in cities while small towns had to fight for every nickel. (Wouldn't Minden be glad to be bailed out of arena repair costs the way the Sky Dome can miraculously forget its financial woes?)

The federal government seems just as neglectful. First it was the trains — which took people from small towns to their jobs in the city — and now it's the post office. For decades, we enjoyed being able to go to the post office on Saturdays to see if there was anything new in the box. We don't grumble about not having home delivery like our city brethren do; we accept that it's not feasible.

Canada Post now says the numbers don't warrant keeping enough staff on hand on Saturdays to sort the mail. Besides, it says, Saturday mail was an unfair privilege. Unlike train patrons, who at least were warned "If you don't use it, you'll lose it," we had our service cut back without warning. Short of inviting all new immigrants to move here, we'll never get the get the service back. To add salt to the wound, this happens just as Canada Post makes other changes to distribution. Mail is now sorted in Peterborough instead of Lindsay, adding an extra 45 minutes to the driver's route and often causing delays in arrival in Haliburton. Local post office workers can't put mail in our boxes if the mail hasn't arrived yet. Are we spoiled because we expect our mail in our box by noon? A lot of businesses don't think so. Cheques must be processed and it's sometimes difficult to find a bank teller on today's date past two o'clock. If a response is required, outgoing mail must be at the post office before 1 p.m. That's impossible if letters aren't received until 2 p.m.

In ignoring the needs of rural residents, the federal government also seems to be ignoring one of the realities about Canada: it's a geographically vast country with relatively few residents (some of whom, believe it or not, refuse to be co-operative by living in the city.) Therefore costs of certain services will be higher. Maintaining east-west (national) links is difficult but most Canadians are willing to pay the price of being Canadian. Although reason is called for — we can't expect open heart surgery to be performed at every hospital, large or small — all Canadians have the same rights regardless of where they live.

Because of a lack of confidence, many Canadians will not help the government out of its present conundrum. If people could be guaranteed the money would go directly towards reducing the deficit, they'd gladly donate $1,000 a year. Ask them to pay $1,000 in the form of the Goods and Services tax and you have anarchy. We wouldn't grumble about an increase in the cost of postage if we had guarantees it would pay for service, not a bureaucracy. When a government so blatantly ignores the people's wishes, it shouldn't be surprised when the favour is returned. M.P.

Arena delay protest

To the Editor:

I am writing this letter as a concerned taxpayer in Wilberforce, to protest the late opening of the local arena.

The arena opened last year the third week of October, and it was expected that the same would be true this year. Consequently the Wilberforce Minor Hockey Assoc. in conjunction with the league it participates in, drew up their schedules for Oct. 27, but had to be rescheduled for Nov. 3. However, since the uncertainty of the opening date, it has been again rescheduled for Nov. 10.

This delay, which seems to have been motivated by cost only, has put the Wilberforce teams at a distinct disadvantage with their respective leagues, as well as presenting them with an added financial burden. The additional expense is a result of the teams having to travel to Haliburton ($60. per hour) and Bancroft ($55. per hour) to practice for their games, as opposed to a $30. per hour local fee.

It would appear that the ice in the curling rink (presently installed) is of more importance to the community than supplying the facilities for the young people of the community.

Regarding the delay, a petition of over 90 signatures supporting the early opening of the arena, was presented to the Reeve of the Township, apparently to no avail.

As taxpayers and people concerned with minor hockey, we feel that there is no justification for this delay.

Rick Huffman,
Wilberforce, Ont.

Editor's note: The delay is discussed in this week's Wilberforce News.

Story hits home

To the Editor:

"When Push Comes to Shove" and "Nowhere Else to Turn" hit so close to home I am writing to say thanks to family violence counsellor Annegreth Gerrard and writers Sharon Lynch and Martha Perkins for describing the situation so many rural women find themselves in. My 10-year-old car (that my husband has run into the ground) breaks down far from "home" so a stranger allows me to phone my husband. He "reluctantly" says that he (unemployed and with time on his hands) will come. Of course, he never shows up. Then the icy, sleety time I drove an hour to the Motor Vehicle bureau to renew my driver's license only to discover he had it; besides which I couldn't even clean my slush-covered windshield because he had removed the jug of washer fluid I always carried.

When someone invited us for Thanksgiving dinner, he gave her an off answer and never told me, spoiling yet another holiday. Bills are never paid until they're past due, even though he has the money. He has to finish that beer because he paid for it, even though we both know he will refuse my offer to drive until he falls asleep behind the wheel on the way home.

How I wish there was a mobile unit for villages and isolated areas for suffering women who have nowhere to turn, manned by mature people who know better than to give snap answers because there is no "quick fix."

I grew up in an environment that was so bizarre it was a distinct improvement to enter into marriage with an uncommunicative mamma's boy. Rather than abating, the loneliness increases with time while hope for a better tomorrow fades.

EVERY NOW AND AGAIN there's a story that comes along that makes you feel good inside and restores your faith in human nature. Such a story came my way this week when Roxanne Casey called me over at the Valu-mart in Haliburton to tell me that she had some good news. Roxanne said she and another woman were operating the cash registers when two boys around 15 years of age walked over and pinned a poppy on each of them. The boys, who had purchased the poppy's at the IGA, told the girls they had two left over and wanted them to have the poppies. Roxanne told me that this little gesture just made her day. Yes, nice things are still happening.

The cenotaph in Haliburton has a new look, thanks to the Haliburton Branch of the Royal Canadian Legion. A new flag pole has been erected on a solid cement base, new floodlights have been installed and a new electric system is in place and now loud speakers can be used at special events. The three legion members responsible for the labour on this project are Jack Bannon, Owen Burmania and Peter Grolman.

According to an article in the Queen's University newspaper, the Golden Gaels have high praise for Mark Robinson of Haliburton who plays football for the team. In last Saturday's game, playing before a homecoming crowd expected to hit 12,000, Mark Robinson would be matched against a tough opponent on the line. Claude Scilley, who wrote the article had this to say about Mark. "Mark Robinson is a very good athlete. He has great size and everything else. In two years, he's going to be great, but remember he's still a freshman. Mark's a very intelligent kid, has been right from the beginning. He knows what he is doing and his technique is quite good."

The month of November marks the beginning of the annual Christmas Seal Campaign. Each year, The Lung Association sends a package containing specially designed Christmas Seals to households across the country. In Victoria and Haliburton Counties, these colourful seals arrive at over 30,000 homes. The campaign goal in Victoria-Haliburton Counties is $40,000. Last year, the campaign raised close to $38,000 in this area. These donations were put to good use last year, and will be again. They made possible the extensive Lungs Are For Life School Program carried out in all elementary schools. They provided support for Better Breathing Courses, and the Air Force Asthma Program. Cold Weather Masks are available at Haliburton County Home Support Services. Using Christmas Seals on your Christmas Mail shows your support of all these programs and the research that makes them effective.

"Hunting For Something" begins this Sunday November 4th and continues on through until Wednesday, November 7 at St. George's Anglican Church in Haliburton at 7:30 p.m. Guest preacher is Bishop Desmond Hunt. To-night (Wednesday evening) is Hallowe'en an annual event that has been with us for many years. One has to stop and wonder if it won't be too much longer before Hallowe'en as we know it, could be a thing of the past. Each year it would appear that fewer children are making the trip to the various homes for treats. There is certainly a tremendous difference between Hallowe'en now and what it used to be like a few years ago. Gone are the days when the children of the village would gather to start a march to each and every store with a cry of "trick or treat" and shell out. The store owner would usually have treats for one and all, then the group would move onto the next store and the same procedure would be carried out. This evening is another Hallowe'en so let's make it a night for the children and a night of fun, not a night for noise and vandalism.

DOWN OUR ROAD

SHARON LYNCH

SHE WOULD NEVER have thought it would end up like this. It was supposed to be a mini-holiday. But fate had stepped in and she was starting to wish she had never left the city. It had seemed like a good idea at the time. Take a few days off and turn this weekend off herself at the cottage into a five day break of nothing but 'R and R'. She figured if she left Toronto early in the morning she would be in Haliburton before noon. This would give her plenty of time to warm the cottage before nighttime. It would be pretty cold this time of the year and the old place would need at least half a day to push out the cold and dampness.

Unfortunately, in her haste to get away she had neglected to check the car's gas gauge. A bad mistake, as it sputtered to a stop just north of Barrie. And as fate would have it, she had passed three gas stations about two miles from where her car came to rest. Being a cautious woman, the last thing she wanted to do was hitchhike back to the last station so she got out and started walking.

Although the sun shone optimistically, a strong wind was coming straight out of the north and by and felt as though the cottage was that much closer. This feeling did not last long. Fifteen miles down the highway, she got a flat tire. Fortunately there were no other cars on the road at the time as she guided her weaving, wobbly vehicle over to the shoulder. She came to a stop beside a cavernous old house with broken windows and waist-high weeds now blackened from the recent frost. Obviously there was no one there who could help her with this latest setback.

Never having changed a tire before, she was hesitant to start now. But knowing the Lord helps those who help themselves, she gamely hoisted the spare tire and jack from the trunk of her car and set to work.

Unfortunately, aside from prying off the hub caps, she was unable to do any more. The bolts would not budge, no matter how hard she tried. Then, like a knight in shining armour, a pickup loaded with pumpkins appeared on the horizon. "How appropriate" she thought to herself as she stood watching the pumpkin man quickly change the tire. "Happy Halloween", he grinned when the job was done as he set off with his orange cargo.

It was now mid-afternoon and she was still not there. She was beginning to wonder if she would ever reach the cottage. The thought of the cold little place by the lake, where she had not been for several weeks, was no longer as enticing as it had been this morning. Soon the sun would be down and instead of hours used in warming the cottage, she had spent that time just in trying to reach it. Shivering at the thought of the chilly bed she would probably have to contend with she didn't notice at first the time she reached her destination, her lips were blue with cold. One of the men at the station felt sorry for her and gave her a ride back to her car. With a tip of his cap, he left her with a cheery "Happy Halloween" and drove off. She had forgotten that today was in fact Halloween.

The ghostly light illuminated the road and bush clearly. She wasn't sure she could handle complete darkness, for not one car had passed her since she started out on foot.

Back on the road once more, she cursed her bad luck at this delay. It had taken her over an hour to get back on her way. And because she had left in such a rush that morning, she had not bothered to eat breakfast. However, the long cold walk to the gas station had stirred her hunger and now as she drove along her stomach made sounds akin to the groan of some monster hidden deep in her mid-section. Since she was already behind schedule anyway, she decided to pull over and grab a hamburger at the next restaurant.

Of course she would have to pick the slowest restaurant between Toronto and Parry Sound to stop at and eat. The waitress was pleasant enough and the cardboard jack-o-lanterns and skeletons leered down from the walls in a friendly way. But the place was packed and the kitchen was obviously not able to keep up with the rush.

By now she was feeling frustrated and agitated, though no longer hungry as she once more pulled out into the highway traffic and continued north. Her food stop had cost her almost another hour and a half. It was tempting to put the gas peddle right to the floor and try to make up from some lost time. However the very visible presence of several OPP cruisers travelling the highway persuaded her that a slower pace was advisable.

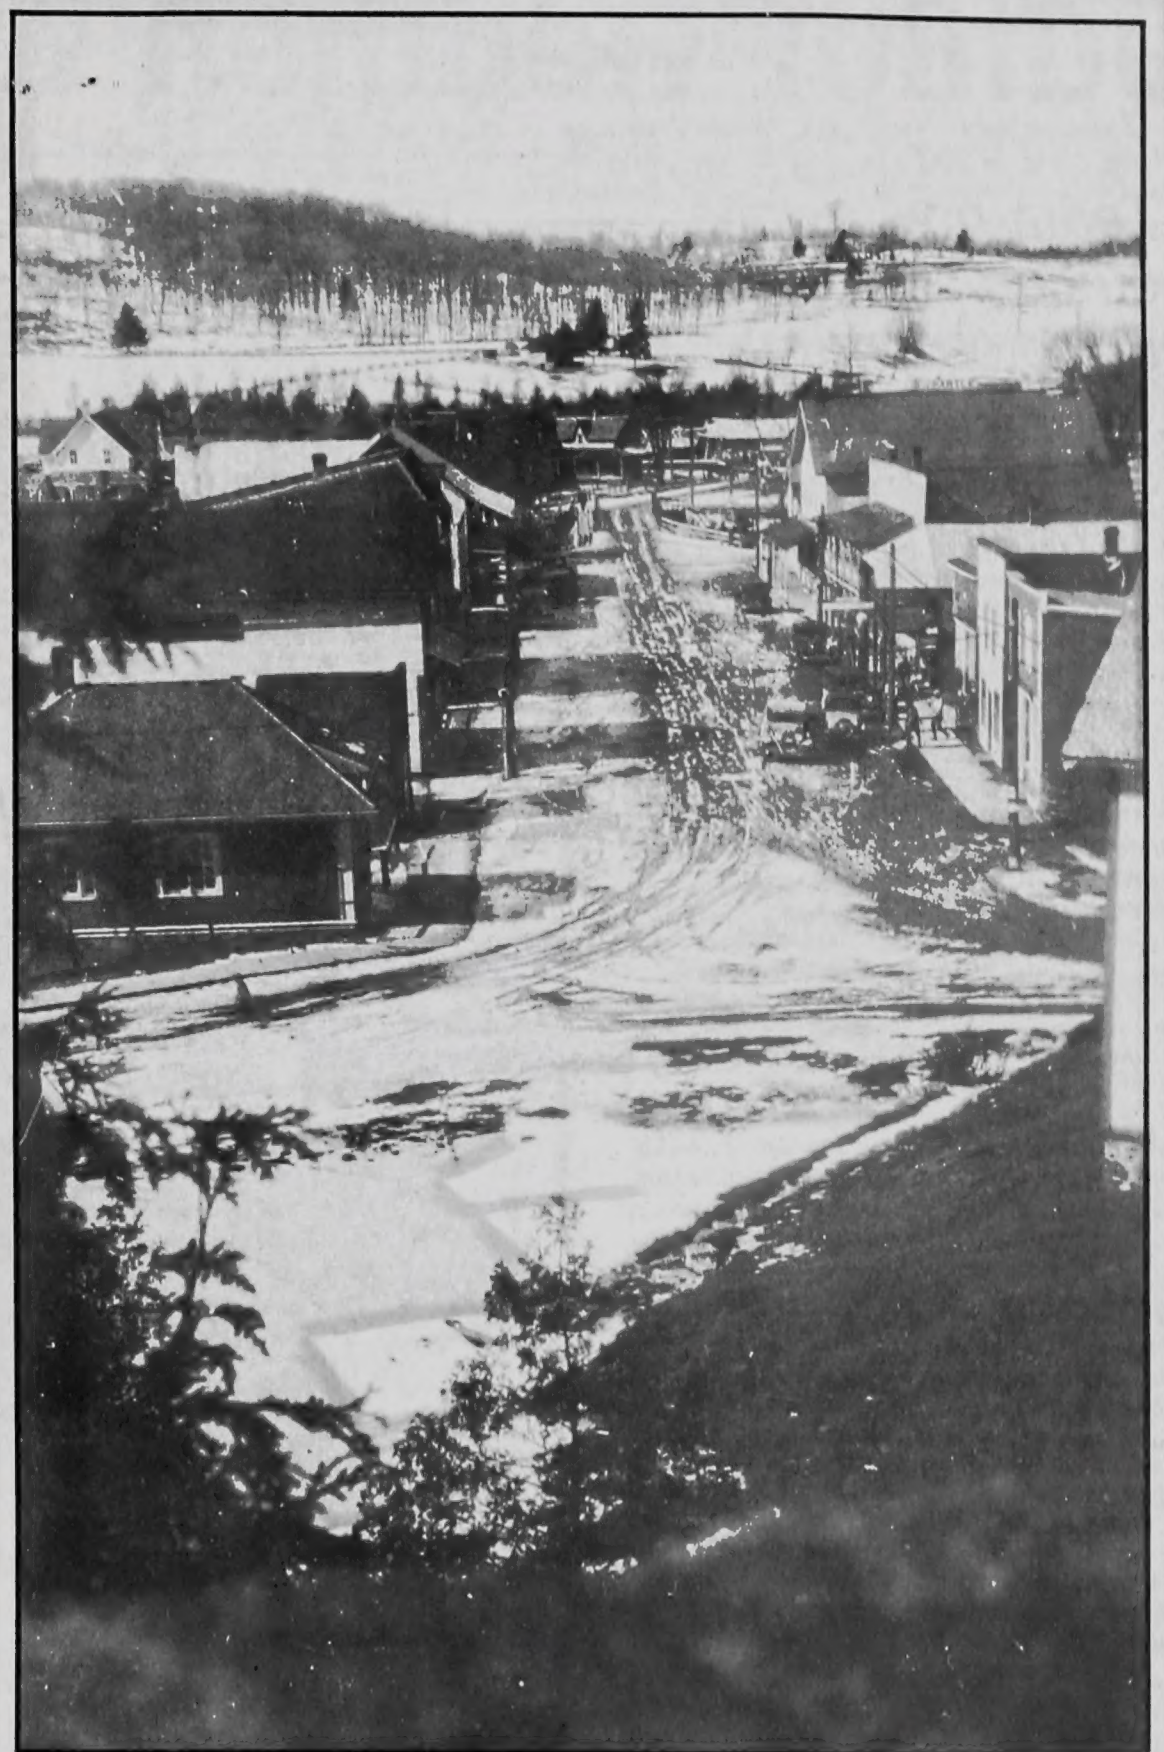

Finally, she reached the cut off onto highway 118

the odd sound coming from the car's engine. But when it started losing power, she became aware that something was once more amiss. As the vehicle slowed more and more, she steered it over onto the shoulder and just in time. The engine gave a death rattle and quit. Putting her head down on the steering wheel, she wondered what on earth she was going to do.

It was five o'clock in the afternoon and though the cottage was tantalizing close, it was still a good twenty minute drive down a backroad lined with empty cottages. Chances were good that on Wednesday, October 31st there was absolutely no one around. She had two choices. She could sit in the car and hope that someone she knew might happen to drive by — an unlikely scenario. Or she could grab her small suitcase and start walking. Despite the cold, the latter seemed her best choice.

There was only about a mile left when the moon came up. That at least proved to be the one and only blessing of this terrible day. The ghostly light illuminated the road and outlined the bush clearly. She wasn't sure she could have handled complete darkness, for not one car had passed her since she started out on foot. The thought of coming across a skunk or larger animal was the last thing on her mind. All she wanted to do was get to the cottage. Cold or not, it was better than outside. She'd pull the chair up close to the stove once she got a fire going. The suitcase had become very heavy over the last hour and to put it down and sit beside some warmth, out of the unending north wind, was all she Will your radio be obsolete?

PEOPLE HAVE apparently been throwing away their old-fashioned LP album players in 'record' numbers, and replacing them with the 'compact disc,' or CD players that came on the market in the last couple of years.

People who've been around longer than I have — and some museums — can talk about or show you how Edison started with a small cylinder, then replaced it with fat discs that rotated at 80 rpm. These, of course, were replaced by the thinner, shellac 78 rpm records in the 30s and most people have had a chance to see this kind.

In the fifties, 33s and 45s on vinyl became the standard, and now they are apparently both virtually obsolete because the digital CD disc reproduces sound so much better.

Now it looks like you can be giving serious thought to replacing all your radios some time after 1992! The computer-type technology that makes for such fantastic sound on CDs is going to come to radio, replacing both AM and FM broadcasting as we know it today.

A system called Digital Audio Broadcasting (DAB) will bring the same pure sound clarity to broadcasting, and your set will be able to get national networks direct from satellites, or local programming from nearby transmitters with absolutely no interference. The nickname for it is 'digital radio.'

You may not see or hear too much about it for a while yet, as a battle is on to select one standard, worldwide system. A meeting is scheduled for Spain in '92 to get all the wrinkles out so the new radios can be produced and put on the market.

One version of the new concept was tested quietly in the Toronto area this summer, under the auspices of the CBC, private broadcasters, and the government department in charge of assigning the frequencies.

After more than 40 years in and around the business, I must admit nobody has been able to explain how the sound gets carried through the air in a way I can grasp. But I still try to keep track of what's happening on the technical side...

Most of you may never have seen the mechanical tuning mechanism that moves when you change stations on a radio dial. There are three widgets that turn — two in one direction, the middle one in the other — when you twist your dial to change stations — resistors I think they are called.

Apparently, before someone found a way to join them up to one knob, everyone used to have a radio with three, separate tuning knobs. I had been in the business for some 25 years before I acquired one of these battery jobs at an auction in Cobocok, and I didn't even know they existed till then.

In the radio was a little notebook from the owner, in which he had kept track of his favorite programs and shows back in 1932. If you wanted to dial CFRB, you had to set the three dials at 80.84.80, and if you wanted to hear the Toronto Star station, CFCA, you tuned to 30.46.40.

It is interesting to see that the owner listened to stations like WBN, in Buffalo, WGY in Schenectady, WLS in Chicago, and WSM, Nashville (for Little Jimmy Dickens, his notes show) — all radio stations that are still operating to day.

Actually, as much as I like the old radio for its feeling of history and beautifully constructed cabinet, I also got a lot of fun out of the correspondence that I found in the bottom of the radio when I was cleaning it out...

The owner apparently got the radio on a swap, as it contained a couple of letters — one from the recipient in Coby, who was annoyed with the deal, It was supposed to be a complete radio, except for the batteries, he wrote. The man who handles used radios says it wasn't worth five bucks, since it didn't have a speaker (which was separate from the tuner in those days), not an aerial.

Mr. Bulmer, a horse-trader from Toronto, who had sold it to him wrote back to advise that he had bought the special stripped model, and if he didn't like it, "you can return me ten dollars and I'll return your knitting machine, as there are lots for sale in Toronto for eight to ten dollars."

I guess some people had as tough a time making a fair trade in 1932 as they do today...

NORTHERN LIGHTS

VIRGINIA MUENZEL

WE GET SO CONFUSED on the day of the time change. Who's idea was it anyway? It's not that I don't understand the logic of the whole thing of Springing forward and Falling back. It's just that the first day is so traumatic. The first thing I do when I get up on THE DAY, is to ask the designated time changer if he has indeed adjusted the clocks. If there is one he hasn't gotten to yet, I don't look at it. Then, for some reason (probably having to do with body clock systems) we seem to spend the next hour or so discussing what time it really is. For instance, in the case of the autumn change, the clocks say 6:00 a.m., but it's really 7:00 a.m. I think.

It wouldn't be quite so confusing if it weren't for the animals. Animals don't do time changes. We can verify that, because Yeti started walking up and down on us this morning at six o'clock, which was really seven o'clock, because Ed hadn't changed the clocks yet. In other words, we didn't get that extra hour's sleep. We never do in the fall. We get it in the spring when we're supposed to get up an hour earlier when we 'spring forward.' Consequently, we run around an hour late all day. But then that's what you get when you depend on cats to get you up in the morning.

Then, there's the whole thing with the chickens. See, we have lights on in the barn on a timer system when the days start getting shorter. If we didn't, once there's less than ten hours of daylight, the hens would stop laying eggs. The lights are set to come on at 6:00 a.m., and go off at 9:00 p.m. It never occurs to us to change the timer on the night before the time change, which means that the lights come on at the old time, but they don't get fed until the new time. Being as pea-brained as they are, I guess they decide something is terribly wrong so they stop laying eggs for a couple of days. And because they've been fed late in the morning and early in the evening, it further confuses the issue. (Whatever it is).

I remember, several years back, someone who must have had a lot of clout decided that we wouldn't do the time change for one year. I guess the purpose was to avoid all of the above confusion. Unfortunately, it was soon discovered that little children were standing out in the dark of pre-dawn in bitter cold, waiting for their school buses, and parents were enraged. One can only wonder why that didn't occur to the person in charge. But I think we can be sure it won't be allowed to happen again, at least until the incident is forgotten by all parties.

So, we all accept the fact that 'springing forward' and 'falling back' is a necessary evil. And, we've all tried staying up late in the fall and retiring early in the spring on the night before, in order to wake up at the appropriate time. It doesn't work. Ed and I have tried adjusting the clocks the night before, but for some reason I cannot fathom, that is even more confusing. At least, within a few days, everyone, including the cats and chickens seems to get the hang of it.

I've even got my column done an hour early because the clock says 9:30, but it's really 10:30. And it must be time to collect eggs because the hens have been up since 6:00 which was really 5:00. . . No, it's the other way around. . . I'm not sure at all. . . I'm so confused.

Junior Redmen take Kawartha title

Team now awaits outcome of games in Peterborough

by LEN PIZZEY

Publisher

Dominating the league through six regular season games, Haliburton high school's Junior Redmen football team earned the Kawartha West title on Friday without a playoff. They did it by defeating Fenelon Falls 44-0 before a hometown crowd to go undefeated on the season.

The win gave the Junior Redmen an automatic berth in the Kawartha final in Peterborough on November 8, against a team that has yet to be determined.

A combination of size and skill made Haliburton unstoppable this season, and could very well take them to the COSSA championship in Belleville on November 14.

Chris Greenfield put the Redmen on the board in the first quarter with what proved to be the winning touchdown. Corbie Kent threw to Greg Brohman for a two point conversion. Jerry Cooper then followed up with a touchdown, and again it was Kent to Brohman for two points.

Rounding out the scoring in the first half, Kent went in from a yard out on a quarterback sneak. The convert was missed, leaving the Redmen in front 22-0 at the half.

In other games his team has dominated, coach Gary Brohman has gone to his bench in the second half to give rookie players some game experience. But last Friday, knowing his team would face a 13 day layoff before the Kawartha final, he decided to give his first string a workout. As a result, the score rose to 44-0 as Greenfield scored another six points, Paul Hewitt went into the endzone on a three yard draw play, and Kent tossed a pro pass to Greg Brohman for six more. Kent and Brohman teamed up for two points the Hewitt touchdown, and Andy Bacon added two more on Brohman's TD to cap another impressive 60 minutes of football by the junior team.

While the outcome of the Kawartha final is far from certain, coach Brohman says his juniors stand "a very good chance" of taking their undefeated streak all the way to the Quinte regional final.

The seniors face a tougher challenge. Their 23-0 domination of Fenelon Falls on Friday earned them a chance at the Kawartha West championship this Thursday. But they'll be up against their nemesis, the powerful team from I.E. Weldon who have won both previous encounters with the Redmen this season. To win, the Haliburton boys will have take the power out of Weldon's offense, as well as connect on more short passes to keep ball control and churn out first downs.

Strong defensive play was key to the Redmen victory on Friday. Jamie Dollo set the tone, snagging an interception and running 20 yards for a touchdown in the first quarter.

In the second quarter, Jason Morissette stole a Penalty kicks give Seniors Kawartha West

It had to be decided by penalty kicks, but when the shootout was over Haliburton's senior Redmen soccer team were Kawartha West champions.

The Redmen and Fenelon Falls battled to a two-all tie at the end of regulation play last Wednesday in Fenelon, on goals by Jan Haedicke and Jason Goodall. The match then went to two overtime periods, both of which failed to break the deadlock. There could be no tie, however, and so a shootout was called, with both teams given five kicks.

Haedicke, Goodall and Chris Holliday-Rhodes made the most of their opportunities, while Fenelon missed one to make it 3-2. Fenelon failed to capitalize on their final opportunity, giving the Redmen the victory and the Kawartha West title.

Coach Walter Tose said time spent practising penalty kicks paid off when the pressure was on. The Haliburton boys were able to put the ball in the corners, while Fenelon went straight at the goalkeeper and lost.

The victory capped a regular season in which Haliburton earned five victories while losing only once, and gave them an opportunity to advance to the Kawartha final tournament played last Thurs-

Timbers takes on Fenelon

Redmen need to dig deep for their next win

Fenelon pass on the same play call that produced Dollo's defensive TD. Morissette was stopped just a yard short of six points, but Ryan Timbers made short work of the remaining distance, plunging in for six points and then booting a convert to give Haliburton a 13-0 lead at the half.

A missed field goal earned the Redmen another point, and later in the third quarter Fenelon conceded a single after being held deep in their own zone.

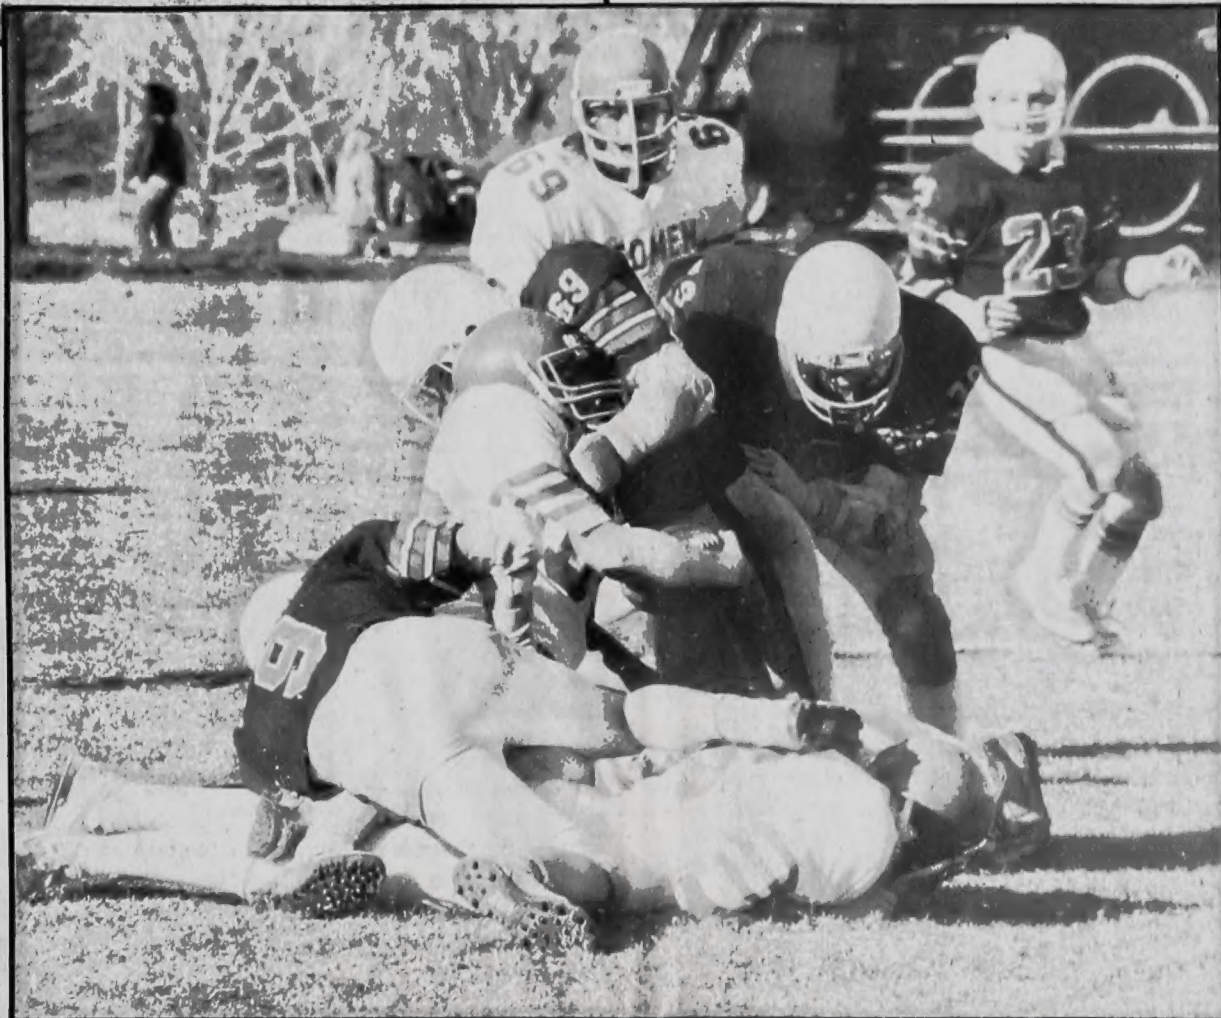

In the fourth quarter, Timbers chalked up his second touchdown of the day and added another point on the convert to cap a 23-0 win for Haliburton.

Along with the interceptions by Dollo and Morissette, the Redmen got solid defensive play from Walt Griffin, Mark Klages, Andy Lewis, John Vuksic and Jim Hyde.

Weldon, in the meantime, was handing LCVI a 36-0 defeat, setting the programme for Thursday's final.

The Senior Redmen will have to dig deeply into their playbook and into their will to win if they're going to stop Weldon. "We're going to need an awfully good game to beat them, because they have a really good running game," says coach Gary Brohman.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. at I.E. Weldon in Lindsay.

Bookies lose shirts in Vasey match-up

THIS WEEK IN THE M.H.L.

by: CHIP TRUEMAN

WELL HOCKEY HOUNDS let me begin by thanking my "mystery colleague" at The Echo for keeping track of things during my absence. I am pleased to hear that everything at home ran along smoothly. Not so for me of course. I have just spent the last two weeks in beautiful Baghdad as a special U.N. envoy, promoting a peaceful solution to the Gulf Crisis. Unfortunately after much deliberating Madman Whos-his-name and I could not strike a deal. The only good part of the trip was the golf. You really have to watch out for those sand traps through!!! Anyway "the hack is back", let's get on with it.

We should start things off with the biggest game of the night. Las Vegas bookies lost their shirts as Vasey Insurance upset Roberts-Austin Fuels by a score of 9-3. Kevin Phillips and Bernie Upton teamed up on six of the brokers' nine points. Dan Ambridge and Carl Rowbotham netted the other three. Hugh Nichol was also a "credit" to his team. His presence "accounted" for two assists. On the losing side, Erin Nicholls, Paul Howe and Wade MacIness were the only three who could get the puck past a hot Dave Elstone. The loss is R-A's first of the season.

Meanwhile, Bishop and Wilson's woes continue. They lost again on Sunday. Emmerson Lumber beat the surveyors 6-4, leaving the team winless this season. Even the return of scoring ace Joe Roberts was not enough to spark the team to victory. Emmerson Lumber, on the other hand, played a terrific game despite the temporary loss of one of their big shooters. Rick Wood, injured in a chain saw accident, will miss many of the remaining games. There were a lot of scratches on both sides but most of the players who did show up got a point. On the winning side, Darrell Stamp, Tony Scheffee, Leroy Evans, and Roy Scott put the puck in the net. B and W's goals came from Tran LaRue, Jim Winn, Joe Roberts and Tim Cawker.

What started out as a close match, soon turned into a rout in the six o'clock game. Elstone Motors trailed Curry's by a mere three goals in the first half of the game, but quickly ran out of steam later on. In the end, it was General Motors pounding Chrysler by an 11-3 count. Scoring for Curry Motors were Chris Hodgson (4), Andy Salvatori (3), Ryse Jenkins (2), Ron Perrin and Andy Hodgson. Scott Rae got a pair and Steve Cooper a loner to make up Elstone's three. The less said about this game the better . . .

day in Peterborough. Here, despite a valiant effort, they came out on the losing end of a match against St. Peters.

Haliburton took St. Pete's by surprise. The Redmen were fired up and they played their best game of the season against the powerful and highly skilled St. Pete's club. The Redmen set up a number of scoring opportunities but were unable to follow through. They trailed 1-0 at the half, and allowed St. Pete's to net another early in the second half before closing the door on a 2-0 loss.

The defeat put the Redmen in the consolation final, but they were tired out by the effort against St. Peters and had to settle for another loss.

Coach Walter Tose said he was extremely pleased with the team's performance this year. With some key players from last year's team graduating last June, he anticipated that it would be a rebuilding year. But the team gelled quickly and became the squad to beat in the Kawartha West league.

"We did far better this season than I ever thought we would," said coach Tose.

when I think about Youngdale Fuels win over Haliburton Lumber. He played an outstanding game between the pipes. Another big name ??? How about Kenny Barry. Yes sir Krazy Legs Ken scored three times. That's a hat trick to you and me. Combine those two names with the likes of Mike Rae, Tim Davies, Roger Bain, Gary Burch, Glen Scully and Tim Chambers and you've got a 10-4 victory. On the other hand if you mention Ron Yake, Billy Whitaker and Rob Craigen, you've got a 4-10 defeat. Funny thing about hockey, eh? Atoms' potential shines in openers

Team boasts of 4 wins, 1 tie and 1 loss as opponents tumble

Haliburton's O.M.H.A. Atoms started their season with a 7-4 victory over Woodville. Haliburton jumped into a three-goal lead in the first period with goals by Joshua Burk from Joshua Dennis, Greg Schell from Matthew Burk, and Joshua Burk, again from Greg Schell.

Woodville came back in the second with two goals and a single Haliburton marker was tallied by Joshua Dennis unassisted.

The third period saw Haliburton out score Woodville 3-2 with Haliburton goals by Joshua Burk from Joshua Dennis, Greg Schell from Aaron Galbraith and Matthew Burk from Joshua Burk.

It was off to Sunderland for the second game of the season which ended in a 3-3 tie. Ryan O'Neil scored first for Haliburton with assists from Greg Schell and Ian Clements. Billy Dovell added an unassisted goal. Sunderland scored once in the 2nd and twice more in the third. Billy Dovell scored again for Haliburton from Joshua Burk to end the game in a tie.

The Atoms suffered their first loss at the hands of the fast skating team from Ops, even though at one point in the game they enjoyed a four-goal lead. Haliburton was all over them until the break between the second and third periods. The Ops coach must have really gave the boys a talking to because they came out flying in the third. They came back from the four-goal deficit to finally win the game by one. Haliburton scoring went like this: 1st period Haliburton—Aaron Galbraith from Andrew Madill, Josh Burk from Billy Dovell and Andrew Postlethwaite. 2nd period action saw Matthew Burk score unassisted. In the 3rd second of the third period it was Matthew Burk from Andrew Postlethwaite.

The O.M.H.A. Atoms got their chance to redeem themselves when they visited Ops. Andrew Madill struck first for Haliburton with an assist from Matthew Billings. Also in the first period it was turnabout as Matthew Billings scored with an assist by Andrew Madill, and Billy Dovell picked up the second assist on the play.

Ops came back to score in the second to narrow the gap, but Josh Burk notched the insurance goal in the third with help from Greg Schell. Haliburton won 3-1.

After the 3-3 tie with Sunderland, Haliburton was looking for a win and got it as they outscored their opposition 3-2. Josh Burk was in good form as he scored twice unassisted. Once in the first and again in the third. Sunderland came back with a goal but then Andrew Postlethwaite scored again with help from Matthew Burk and Billy Dovell. Sunderland came back with a goal but time ran out on them and Haliburton skated off with the victory.

Haliburton visited Minden next, and came off with another win. This time it was Andrew Madill scoring the first goal once again assisted by Matthew Billings. These boys seem to have something going. The ever dangerous Josh Burk then struck with an unassisted effort. The second period saw Billy Dovell score from Matthew Burk. Minden tried hard but could not get anything by Blaze Foster. The third period saw Josh Burk score again to give Haliburton a 4-0 win and a shut out for Blaze Foster.

This team has great potential and a lot of talented players. They should do well.

Goals galore as Tri-County Novices get season off to a victorious start

With 34 goals in two recent games, Haliburton's Tri County Novice team is off to a strong start in early season play.

On Thursday the Haliburton team outplayed Minden 17-0. Shane Campbell was the player of the game, notching five goals. Adam Henry earned a hat trick, while Scott Curry, Jennifer Catell and Logan Roberts each scored a pair. Single markers were netted by Ryan Kirkpatrick, Andrew Brown, Danny Koz and Graham Schakelaar. Kori Roberts earned her first shutout in the nets, helped out by the strong defensive play of Adam Wilson, Jamie Doan and Kyle Robinson.

On Sunday Haliburton had another 17 goal day, while allowing Minden to score only once. Andrew Brown and Shane Campbell each scored hat tricks, while Adam Henry had two goals and three assists. Graham Schakelaar and Logan Roberts tallied two apiece. Singles went to Ryan Kirkpatrick, Kyle Robinson, Adam Wilson, Jennifer Catell and Jamie Doan. Assists were earned by Scott Curry and Danny Koz.

Kori Roberts once again played a strong game in the net.

The Haliburton Tri County Novices now have a record of three wins and no losses.

Novices hammer Little Britain

After playing five games in eight days the Haliburton OMHA Nicholls Novice Huskies had an easier week with two practices capped by a lopsided victory in league play.

In Little Britain on Sunday, October 28 the Huskies scored early and often. They scored five goals in the first period, six in the second and added three more in the third for a 14 to 0 win. All of the Huskies figured in the scoring plays except for goalie Brian Mulholland who notched his first shut-out of the season.

The centres led the way as Kenny Ablett scored five times and assisted on three others while Mike Craigen scored two and earned four assists. On the wing Mike Morrisette had a hat trick, Greg Forgrave had two goals and three assists, Chris Nimigon scored his first goal of the season to go with three assists and Ryan Wood assisted on three.

The defencemen, who rarely let Little Britain past the centre redline, also contributed to the offence. Cole Glendinning opened the scoring in the game, Devon Dart and Bobby Hebert had two assists each and Jamie Johnston chipped in with one assist.

No consensus on Ride

licts got in the way, he said. "When will we start listening to the positive things? We should be enhancing and promoting (the area with) open and constructive dialogue. . . This is an opportunity to deal with the problems so next time" the problems will be solved.

As the area grows, Homestead says, there are bound to be more problems. But they can be dealt with. "We don't have the luxury of deciding who comes up here. We should be grateful for who we get."

When Maher asked Homestead how many of the people who signed the petition were locals, Homestead said he was asked only to present it. "I have no control over who signed it." (There's another petition with approximately 70 people against the Ride.)

"We're not professional enough to hold that kind of party," said Maher. At previous Rides, he worked with organizers to improve security and reduce the risk of problems. However, with such large numbers, that task is beyond their abilities.

As well, Maher said it was normal that the five councillors didn't always agree. "If you can show me five waitresses who get along well, you've got a perfect world."

Councillor Lewis Stevens says Minden cannot afford to turn away Ride for Sight. "I don't have a pension, no government grants or union. (Stevens owns Minden Shell.) I derive my living from servicing our major industry, which is tourism. I jeopardize my livelihood if I vote against people like this coming into our area.

"There are no difficulties which can't be handled with negotiations." He noted that the first resolution called for supporting the Ride "in principle" until all concerns be satisfied. Because it was voted down immediately, Stevens thinks the motion wasn't given a fair deal.

Sisson said the second debate hadn't changed his mind. "I have no problem with the Ride on private property. I have no wish to re-open this issue."

Many people have told him they support council's decision, says Berry. The municipality spent $180,000 building a new ball diamond near the centre and "I'd hate to see anything happen to it." He says the remaining fairgrounds property is too small.

In his survey of business people, he didn't agree the majority were in full-favour of the Ride's return. "They said 'I would like it as a businessman but as a father, I wouldn't.'"

Businessman Jerry Jordan says he doesn't like the way debate was limited at the last council meeting. (Reeve Ray Moore insisted only those on the agenda be allowed to speak, although he did make two exceptions.)

"Both sides do not have a fundamental right to stand up and speak," Jordan says. "I'll support my fellow business people (who want the Ride) even though it literally kills my business [Highlands Jewellery.] As a father and person who lives beside the fairgrounds, I don't know which way to go. . . I realize how important a dollar is but I will not prostitute myself for the sake of a dollar."

Jordan said Moore lost the vote because he did not allow everyone the opportunity to speak.

"(The decision) was all cut and dried before I got here," Moore interjected.

"You will be a better reeve once you learn to get along with people," Jordan resumed. He suggested a committee be set up because "there is personal conflict" on council.

The community must now work on healing wounds from the debate, Jordan said. "People have polarized each other rather than work together. I'll work with (Michael Homestead) because his letter was probably the fairest. He was way ahead of you guys on council."

"We've made a rash decision but we have not had a vehicle to discuss it. I have still not made up my mind. If it comes alive, I hope we have the common sense to change the problems. Each year it gets better and better by correcting the faults."

"I hope you run for council. . . " Moore said — before Jordan interjected, "Not a chance" — " . . . because people of your calibre are required. This is not an open-debate meeting for Ride for Sight. We have an agenda we have to get through. . . That's the way councils are run."

As to comments that personalities stand in the way of decision making, Moore said "Bern and I fight. That's not unusual. Mike and I fight. That's not unusual. The three heavies are here. We have minds of our own. I look at the overview of what's good for the community. I don't look at the 50 bad reasons because it's all hypothetical. What I look at is it produces jobs."

"It's not hypothetical when there's toilet paper on our lawn" during the Ride, Jordan said. "That can happen anywhere," Moore said.

At this point, council conversation turned to encouraging the public to bid for the Ride. Maher asked Chamber manager Robyn Jarvis, who was in the audience and who had made a presentation at the first meeting, if the Chamber could sponsor the Ride.

Jarvis responded by saying she came from a smaller village, Carlisle, which holds the largest Bluegrass festival, attracting 50,000 people. "It's a community effort of people helping the police (to make sure there are not security problems.)" When Maher questioned her further, Jarvis said the event was held on private property.

After the meeting, Jarvis said she felt Maher unfairly singled her out. "I was there as an observer, I wasn't slated to speak. I think he used my position to single me out and I don't think that's right."

'Hunt' is likely to turn up surprises

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

IF ONE OUNCE of Bishop Desmond Hunt's enthusiasm brushes off during his four-day mission in Haliburton, St. George's Anglican Church's "Hunting for Something" will certainly lead to some fascinating discussions.

"I'm not going in with a bag of medicine but with a conviction that Jesus Christ is really worth looking at," said the youthful-sounding retired bishop in a telephone interview. "Faith is exciting. God can transform lives and impossible situations."

This will be Bishop Hunt's 130th mission, an opportunity for him and his wife Naomi "to spend a few days getting to know people" and encouraging them to find a wider meaning of Christianity.

"I feel we've got to address the brokenness in the world, but first we must attend to the church's brokenness," he says.

"There's a lot of pessimism about the future. To me, the Christian stand is the only one which allows for the optimism of tomorrow."

Much despair comes from people not having the spiritual dimension within themselves that, as the 23rd Psalm says, "restoreth my soul."

"Faith is often believing what we cannot prove. It leads one into a whole new area of grace, trust and love. The faith given to us 2,000 years ago, I find totally adequate."

"This is an opportunity for a lot of us Christians and non-Christians to examine where we stand in the world in terms of our beliefs," says Rev. John Phillips of St. George's. There are a myriad of self-help books but without faith in God, "there's something missing."

Bishop Hunt "has a very good insight into the scriptures and is able to apply it to our daily life and living, as something lived and experienced," says Rev. Phillips.

He stresses that this way of celebrating St. George's 125th anniversary is also a time for the entire community to re-affirm its faith.

"We live in a society that has a great spiritual hunger," says Rev. Kim Beard, the assistant curator at St. Timothy's Anglican Church who will be conducting a Youth Mission along with Bishop Hunt.

"We are materially blessed but are searching to understand who and what we are."

By nature, children are immersed in that search and Rev. Beard has the ability to help them look within themselves to find the answers. For 24 years, he's attended a Christian camp, first as a camper, then as its director. He's trained as a secondary school teacher, spent two years in Nigeria with CUSO, trekked across the Sahara, was a youth worker in Mississauga high schools and has "a real love of young people."

"Their creativity is very stimulating for me. They still have a wonder about learning," he said in a telephone interview just before he left for Belize with some youths who are taking part in a mission there.

The Bible, and adults, sometimes ignore the voice of the young. Rev. Beard will always remember the summer he was a camp counsellor. It was the end of the week, and he was physically drained. One boy kept putting up his hand to say something. Rev. Beard ignored him until the boy called him "Mr. No Ears."

"He reminded me it was important to listen even if it's not convenient. . . From what kids have told me, they tend to like adults who have respect for them, are willing to listen, and willing to work with them in a team approach."

In his afternoon Sunshine Club gatherings — Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday at 4 o'clock — Rev. Beard plans to "share the joy and love I've experienced" as a Christian. "It's important for people to know God loves them."

In a world where there is so much strife — French/English, Native/non-Native, East/West, black/white — it's important for children to learn how to accept others with love.

"With all this potential division existing within our society, if we create a generation of people whose first priority is to push their own rights as opposed to listening to the needs of others, we have a house that's doomed to fall."

For more information on how people can become involved with the Hunting for Something, and there are numerous opportunities to do that, people can contact the church. There's also an ad in this week's Echo which outlines many of the events.

Minden bids for gathering

Minden council hopes 600 fellow municipal associates will want to come to Minden for their 1993 conference.

On Thursday night, council endorsed Reeve Ray Moore's bid to host the Small Urban Municipalities conference in May, 1993. However, there were concerns about the village's abilities to physically accommodate so many people.

The main gathering point would be the Minden Arena. Guests would have to be split up into smaller groups at surrounding hotels and resorts, such as the PineStone Inn.

The Chamber of Commerce has also added its support to the plan. A decision will be made once a selection committee tours Minden facilities and makes a recommendation.

HALLOWEEN MADNESS

You didn't know what to expect when you walked into the high school last week. There were strange things to be seen and done

by ERIN LYNCH

HHSS student

THERE WERE MANY celebrities at HHSS last Friday: Elvis, New Kids on the Block, and even a Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtle. They were all there for the Hallowe'en costume contest. Well, maybe they weren't the real celebrities, but they looked awfully close. When Crystal Bain (who won first prize) came out looking like The King, I think everyone thought Elvis was still alive and they should call the 1-800 phone line: Have you seen Elvis? Then when Craig Bain, Kyle Hewitt, Jamie Dollo, and Bart Whiting came out as the New Kids, a great roar of applause circled the boys' gym. A few obvious New Kids' fans came running up. The wanna-be's were so good, they got first place as a group! Almost all the teachers dressed up like doctors or nurses, and for this they received a Hallowe'en cake donated by the SAC. It was fun for everyone. Even if you didn't dress up, at least you could see everyone else's costume.

Other Halloween activities that took place included the pumpkin pie eating contest on Thursday. Each contestant was blindfolded as well as the feeder. On the word "go", they proceeded to shove the pie down the eater's throats. The first person finished won their heat. At the end it was Jerry Cooper against Jamie Teatro, not small guys. In their round against each other, they were fed pumpkin pies. This looked extremely disgusting afterwards when the pie hung from their faces. Besides everyone thinking they were going to be sick, they were all trying to

Please turn to page 15

Hold still! There was plenty of laughter and much encouragement from spectators as Haliburton high school students tried to eat an apple on string faster than their fellow competitors. All manner of contortions were allowed, but hands had to stay behind backs. The event was won by Jason Harrison. Shown in the heat of the action are, from left: Jerry Cooper, Ryan Cummings and Mark Klages.

Quite a character: A felt pen added the finishing touches to this bizarre pumpkin face during a carving competition sponsored by the students council at HHSS last Friday. Proudly displaying their creation are, from left: Lisa Ransom, Amanda Woods and Keith McKenzie. The contest was won by the team of Brett Jackson, Aaron Turner, Saskia Smith, Teresa Madill and Reid Elstone.

Weird and wonderful: Hallowe'en has a way of encouraging people to take on another character, especially when they're HHSS students and there are prizes to be won for wearing the best costume. Among the entries in the individual costume competition were, from left: Crystal Perrin as Cave Woman, Ryan Cummings as Bird Man, Keith McKenzie as Tartar Fighter, Charlene Simms as the Three Legged Man, and Andrea Pawluch as Raphael the Ninja Turtle. Winners of the competition were Crystal Bain as Elvis, Larissa Gray as Drug Dealer, and Wyatt Nesbitt as Gary Leeman of the Maple Leafs.

In on the fun: A number of teachers got into the spirit of Hallowe'en on Friday and entered the costume competition sponsored by the Haliburton high school students council. Being introduced to the audience, amid gales of laughter and applause are, from left: Frog person Ginie Hemming, Ninja Turtle Trudy Hawthorne, School marm Jennifer McDonald, Wicked Witch of HHSS Moira Boatman, and the medical team of Bruce Griffith, Patty Brydon and Wanda Mole.

Elvis lives: The King of rock 'n roll made a surprise appearance at HHSS on Friday, and won top prize in the individual costume judging. It wasn't only the 50's clothes, slicked back hair and sideburns that earned Crystal Bain first place in the eyes of an esteemed panel of HHSS custodian judges but her characterization of Elvis, complete with the hip gyrations that so offended television producers in the early days of the King's reign.

Tasteful costumes: Put a bunch of grapes together with a strawberry and what do you get? Fruit cocktail of course, which was the name of this entry in the group costume judging competition at HHSS last Friday, in honour of Hallowe'en. Michelle Simms was decked out in the grape cluster, and the strawberry was worn by Skye Austen. Despite the imaginative costumes, fruit cocktail was not a winner. The group competition was won by New Kids on the Block, also known as Kyle Hewitt, Bart Whiting, Craig Bain, Chad Burden and Jamie Dollo.

Look in next week's Echo for more scary sights of Hallowe'en.

THIS WEEK

FOR THE BANK, BLOOD BANK THAT IS: Thanks to fundraising efforts such as card parties, penny drills and special sales, the Highland Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star was able to donate $630 to the Haliburton Hospital. At first, outgoing Worthy Matron Edith Johnson, at right, thought the money would help pay for an oximetre. However, hospital administrator Marlene Taylor, left, says that is paid for. The money will now be used towards cost of a blood bank, which allows the hospital to store blood on site for emergencies.

Taking back control

wanted to scare me, to aggravate me, to make me pay."

Her anger saved her life, and sanity. It wasn't the police. During the chase, none of the passing motorists tried to help her — although she didn't know exactly how they could. "I guess they just figure you were fooling around or a couple of idiots." Because she was alone in the car, there were no witnesses and it would be her word against his. She'd have to get into an accident before police would have proof of harassment.

"Unless I was dead, there was no proof he tried to run me off the highway."

It's been 13 years since Jean took back control over her life. As she tells her story, she's perfectly calm and self-composed. She even laughs as she describes the final chase down the QEW. "I surprised myself," she beams.

Surprisingly, the healing didn't take long. For five years she lived with her mother and stepfather. He was sick and they needed her help; she needed time to rebuild her life and regain her confidence.

"My problem was I didn't want to talk about it, it would bring me down. But I had a really good doctor. He told me to phone any time — it's just the way he is. I felt I had more worth when I talked to him — and he wasn't a psychiatrist."

Jean simply set her mind on recovering. "I wanted it in the past. I made a bad choice. I was a jolly, happy person before I got married, if I recall.

"When I take about it now, it's as if I'm taking about someone else. It was in a past life."

About three years after she left Al, and a few unsuccessful suitors later — "I told them 'If you don't want just a nice companion during dinner, you can just take me home right now'" — Jean met Norman. They've been together ever since.

"He's there for me, he's very supportive. At first he was really angry (when I told him about Al) but now that part of my life is just gone. We're just so happy now, it doesn't come up any more."

Nonetheless, Jean now knows that such happiness is not a privilege for just a lucky few. "I don't think anybody would be able to do that to me again, that someone would control me to the point I didn't have enough faith in me anymore."

If a woman who is being abused by her partner is reading this story, Jean has one piece of advice: "Get out, get out, before you're destroyed. If you start think there's nothing you can do, just get out. In my case, I would have been dead if I hadn't got myself out."

She means it. Al probably did, too.

Students' opinions sought on smoking

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

Students say no one ever listens to them. The Haliburton County Board of Education wants to prove they're wrong.

After receiving complaints about HHSS students smoking near the historic locomotive, trustees decided to turn to students for the solution. However, one idea it will not tolerate is changing the new smoking rules.

The policy prohibits smoking on board property so the students' smoking area was shut down. This forces students off school grounds if they want to smoke.

In retaliation, students have moved onto municipal property to light up. And Dysart et al says there's little it can do about it.

This "undesignated" smoking area has caused concern for faculty, bus drivers and some residents of Haliburton.

The Haliburton Rotary Club, which spent more than $15,000 last year to have the train renovated, is worried about possible damage to the train, as well as the litter students leave on the ground around it. The club expressed its concerns in a letter to the board.

Earlier this month, bus drivers said student's safety was at risk because they were standing to close too the road.

At Tuesday's meeting, trustees debated whether another smoking area could be set up on school grounds, away from the road and away from the train.

"The best thing to do is to get rid of the policy," said Leroy Eager. He was concerned that Vice-Principal Gary Brohman spends too much time reprimanding students who venture down to the train when they should be in class.

But most trustees did not agree with this solution. "The policy should remain the same," said Craig Pettit. "We should never have had a smoking area in the first place."

He thought giving up the policy would have an adverse effect. "You back off and let these kids back into their little roost, and we are setting up ourselves for the next group."

While most trustees did not agree with this reasoning, they did agree not to change the policy.

"We knew this was going to happen when we brought in the policy, now we will have to live with it," said Linda Mumford.

She suggested putting up no-smoking signs around school grounds on a trial basis, to see if they will have an effect.

"Isn't there some way to ask these young people to move?" asked

Chairman Len Salvatori. He then suggested talking to the students to explain how important a tourist attraction the train is.

"We should ask the students to come up with a solution," said Dale Robinson, superintendent of education. "We might be very surprised."

He then suggested going to the general student body, even the ones who don't smoke, to discover their opinion. "They may not be too sympathetic to the smokers," he said, "but they are good citizens too."

The board was very receptive to this idea.

rural areas don't expect, Szabo said it wasn't a good comparison.

"I can't accept that argument," he says.

"We are changing the way we do business. The way we did it 20 years ago isn't the way it will be today."

This change in hours is one more hardship for local businesses, including The Echo. On a long weekend, mail isn't sorted from Friday until Tuesday, and arrives in the box too late to meet publication deadlines. As well, now that the mail driver's route begins in Peterborough, mail is often not sorted until after 1 o'clock, which is the deadline for outgoing mail. This means businesses cannot respond in that business day.

from the eastern part of the county. The demand is there from other areas as well.

To help oversee the centre, SIRCH is forming the Community Advisory Committee, one of the ministry's mandates. It will be made up of volunteer service providers, users and interested individuals.

SIRCH — Mike Maybee, Barb Fraser, Ann Wood, Annegreth Gerard, Gord Monk, Eric Thompson and Dr. Tina Moga as medical advisor — hopes the clinic will be operational in three or four months. It will be in the new social services office being built by Steve Bowskill below Sky Slider.

"We are struggling to keep enrollment up at HHSS to 600 or more," he said of why he feels a good first impression of the school is important.

After a lengthy discussion, it was decided that trustees Tim Casey, Len Salvatori and Cheryl Murdoch would meet with representatives from HHSS and Sir Sandford to discuss the issue.

THIS WEEK

A scary walk on a dark Hallowe'en night

DOWN OUR ROAD SHARON LYNCH

could think about.

The curve in the road told her she was almost there. Off in the distance, she finally saw lights. So there was someone else up in the middle of the week. She was trying to figure out who it could be when she realized the lights were coming from her own cottage. At first perplexed, a thought then came to her. Maybe her sister had decided to join her.

The driveway loomed just ahead. Taking her first step onto its gravel surface, she was suddenly plunged once more in darkness. The cottage lights had just gone out. "That's strange", she thought. What was even stranger was that there was no car in the driveway. Now she was getting uneasy. Who, she wondered, was in the cottage and why had they suddenly turned out the lights?

Climbing the steps to the back door, she turned the doorknob and pushed. Immediately the caress of warm air and its woody smell enveloped her. Positive someone was playing a joke on her, she set down her suitcase and called out, "Come out, come out wherever you are!", the old phrase she and her sister used as kids. No answer. But there was a sound and it came from the living room. "Now I've got her," she thought with glee and in four long strides was at the living room's open doorway. Moonlight streamed in through the cottage window. Over by the airtight, her father's old rocking chair gently moved back and forth, slowing with each rock until it stopped. Otherwise there was no other sound, no other movement.

She reached for the flashlight that rested to the right of the doorway. Clicking it on, she poked into the shadows surrounding her. Nothing. Then, guided by the light, she went into the first bedroom where the fuse box was. The power was still turned off, just as she had left it the last time she had been there. She pushed the stiff switch on. Instead of sudden illumination, only the lamp beside her bed came on. Again, this was how she had left the place. Yet she had seen it all lit up when she was walking toward it and when the lights went out, they went out all at once, not one at a time.

Deep in thought, she turned on some more lights and put the kettle on for a cup of tea. Waiting for it to boil, she went and sat in the rocker, for she still felt the chill of her long walk. The chair's seat was warm as though someone had been sitting in it only a moment before. That's when she knew.

"Happy Halloween, dad," she said in a quiet voice. "I should have known you'd still be looking out for me. Thanks." Her father had died eight years before, in the month of October; the 31st to be exact.

When he hurts you, go to a doctor and the police. If he sets fire to the house, call the police. The pain of being told by another woman that wives exist solely for their husbands and it is a sin to complain, might send you to Al-anon meetings or to a psychologist, psychiatrist or other counsellors. They will each add something, contributing to your lost sense of identity and personhood and restore that core of inner strength which had deteriorated along with faith and the ability to laugh or even smile.

No, he doesn't really love you. Accept that fact along with another: He will never really change because he is sick and uninterested in getting well. It's impossible for him to understand that you are right for refusing to accept the same insulting treatment both he and his father used to keep his mother in line. Also, your value systems will always be opposed. At the same time he threatens your life, makes you the butt of a sadistic "joke", ruins your health and refuses to either have company or see anyone, he will curse you for throwing out a ragged, stained shirt, bent, rusty nails, or the old electric kettle he was going to fix 10 years ago.

get as close a look as possible. In the end Jerry Cooper won. His lucky prize — a pumpkin pie which I am sure he felt like eating afterward.

On Friday there was apple bobbing which was hilarious to watch because no one could get a hold of their apple long enough to eat it or much less take a bite. The pumpkin carving went well and pumpkins were on display at the dance.

The MuchMusic dance was great on Friday. I thought it was the best dance I have ever been to. The decorations were great, and the music was good. There wasn't one song I didn't like. Students had the opportunity to be on the screen and many were. Everyone had a good time and the comments I heard were all positive.

Our sports teams are doing really well. The Senior soccer team won Kawartha West. Then on Friday the Junior football team defeated Fenelon 44 to 0, making them Kawartha West champs as well. The Seniors will be playing LCVL this Thursday for Kawartha West. The best of luck to you!

Portrait of a politician...

Before the September provincial election, not many people had heard of Dennis Drainville. Now, Victoria/Haliburton constituents will hear a lot about, and from, our New Democrat MPP. But still, the question begs to be asked...

Who is Dennis Drainville?

by MARTHA PERKINS

Editor

BY SEPTEMBER 6, the people of Haliburton County knew Dennis Drainville was the consummate campaigner. They knew he was articulate and, at times, eloquent. They knew he had a good grasp of local issues and was willing to listen to their concerns.

By 11 o'clock that night, they also knew Drainville was going to be the riding's first New Democrat MPP.

Almost two months later, however, there is one thing people want to know: Who is Dennis Drainville? He doesn't belong to any service clubs, has never held elected office and is not known locally for his volunteer activities. How can it be that a man who has only been in the riding for three years (he moved to Fenelon Falls in November 1987 and then to Glamorgan last winter) is now representing the people of Victoria/Haliburton? What ever happened to "I've been here 40 years and I'm still considered an outsider"?

When the new Member of Provincial Parliament arrived at The Echo office in between appointments on Friday, it wasn't to talk about politics so much as to talk about the makings of a politician.

And as the two-hour interview progresses, the polished of the politician gently fades into a more multifaceted patina of a man who learned how to reach out to others only after he had learned how to reach inside himself.

To say Dennis Drainville is a man of contradictions isn't quite true. His opponents played up the fact he used to be a Liberal. In fact, he used to be a lot of things — cook, actor, media personality, author. You can't say he "used to be" an Anglican priest because he still is one. As a politician, his "parish" is now a large stone building named Queen's Park. (Some may argue he's proceeded directly to purgatory without having to go through death.)

But contradictions are not so much his own making. He is firm in his beliefs and knows exactly what he wants to achieve. It's the outside forces in his life which have tugged him in various directions.

Born in Joliette, Quebec in 1954, Drainville's father is French, rural and Roman Catholic. (When the family arrived in New France in 1650, their name was de Rainville.) His mother is Baptist, urban and English. "And I was raised confused."

His parents' eventual marriage dissolution added to the confusion. When he was 10, and a student at the Joliette English Protestant School (no confusion there), Dennis came home for the Easter holidays. Almost overnight, his mother decided her marriage was over. Before Dennis had time to return to school to say goodbye to friends and gather his personal belongings, including a pair of glasses left in his desk, he and his mother were travelling to Toronto to live with her ailing father. Young Dennis's father and older brother — who, not surprisingly, is a "polar opposite" from Drainville — stayed in Quebec.

But the 10-year-old boy didn't have much time to deal with his emotions. To make ends meet his mother got two jobs and wasn't at home very often.

His grandfather was a World War I vet whose gun shot injuries were now catching up on him. Young Dennis would wake up in the morning, prepare breakfast for the three of them, help his grandfather eat, clean up and run to school. At lunch he'd return to prepare the meal and help his grandfather. After school, there was another meal and some housecleaning.

As un-childlike a childhood it may sound, it did have its advantages. "I became very independent and responsible," and the emotional bond between grandfather and grandson was strengthened. However, when his grandfather died three years later, "I was 13 going on 80. In fact, my family always says I burst forth from the womb speaking and philosophizing."

The grandfather's death was pivotal in another sense. Now with only her son at home, Mrs. Drainville started to want to act like a mother. "All of a sudden she started treating me like a 13 year old and I couldn't hack it. I'd been keeping house for too long. If I was responsible enough to take care of my grandfather, why wasn't I responsible enough to take care of myself? My mother didn't immediately assent to the logic of that."

Corresponding with all this upheaval at home was the transformation taking place in the rest of the country. The word Trudeauania was about to be born and Drainville was to be caught up in the frenzy.

"Don't forget I came from Quebec and the French are very aware of politics. You were either rouge or bleu. Rouge meant progressive and progressive meant Liberal. I knew I was progressive, therefore I had to be Liberal."

"Trudeau was exciting. His descriptions and talk of a just society were very compelling. Although I don't think I had a deep understanding of politics, I did have the feeling it was important to be involved in one's country. Citizenry meant to be engaged in issues and concerns that confront our society."

By the age of 14, Drainville was out on his local candidate's campaign trail and a member of the Toronto and District Executive Board of the Liberals. By 16, he was a member of the Liberals' Ontario Executive Board. Perhaps because his grandfather and father fought in the two World Wars that "I had a very deep sense of duty of country, a very conservative feel for the institutions of the country."

"I just kept on working in elections and being involved. School was insignificant and not interesting. I was just bored to tears with it all. Later, when young people contacted me as a cleric, I always took a lot of time to support them and their interests. Their curiosity and inquisitiveness are something to be nourished."

That said, he did finish Grade 12 with honours, but he couldn't bear the thought of another year of high school. His sense of self was strong enough that he dreamed of becoming Prime Minister but until that day arrived, he would be an actor. (It would work for Ronald Reagan.)

"One had to live," however, so as he took courses, auditioned for parts, played Elmo the Snowflake and Little John of Nottingham Fair, and spent five years of voice training at the Royal Conservatory "until I had a reasonable instrument", he was a cook on the CPR trains.

"I worked 16-hours on the train, four days on, four days off. It was a real slice of life — you came across many kinds of people with all kinds of problems and all kinds of perspectives."

This lifestyle was fine for a while but it came to a head one sweltering hot day when the train's air conditioning was broken. "I was tired and fed up and said to myself, 'Dennis, is this really where you want to be in 10 years?' My first response was to jump off the train but I decided to wait until we got back to Toronto."

He took a jump from the stage at the same time. "I was classically trained in Greek tragedy and Shakespeare and these were the days when everything was Canadian and experimental. I was the wrong person at the wrong time. At auditions, they wanted me to wriggle on the floor and sizzle like bacon" and he wanted to deliver heartrending soliloquies with his booming, "reasonable instrument."

What to do?

I am a driven person, there's no question about that. Some say I'm driven because of my wanting to help people. I tend to be like a very typical caregiver, calling on my own woundedness and wanting to protect others from being wounded.'

When talking to Drainville, you realize things don't happen in isolation. There are always undercurrents to the story, always things happening in another part of his life. To find out what he decided to do next, you first have to go back again to his childhood.

His maternal great-aunt and grandmother were devote Baptists. The great-aunt was dying and from the ages of four to six, the three spent a lot of time together. "Before Arthur Godfrey's show came on the radio — a lot of your older readers will remember Arthur Godfrey — we used to have a half an hour of hymns. I would give a small, short homily and they'd we'd listen to Arthur Godfrey. Let's just say I was marked from that experience."

In youth, religion wasn't always as important but it always was there. "It was never a matter of losing my faith, but rather me being lost."

In 1970, in the midst of his CPR days, "I had begun going back to church on my own." His choice, for with his background a choice had to be made, was St. Thomas's, an "Anglo-Anglican — very Catholic" — church in Toronto. "On one hand you had the wonder of Catholic worship and on the other, the moral, ethical and attitudinal Protestant approach."

The initial main attraction was to be able to sing in the choir "but strange things begin to happen. You actually start listening to what's said. Deep within me there was a yearning for understanding."

It would be fed at Woodsworth College, where Drainville spent two years enrolled in university preparation courses. His goal was to enroll in Trinity College, and he needed at least 80 per cent to be accepted. He got 85 per cent.

That was the easy part. Before he got his Master of Divinity, he needed his Bachelor of Arts degree, a total of six years of university. "So we're talking about a long haul."

Focusing on medieval literature, Drainville's "major opus" was on St. Bernard de Clairvaux as a politician. Most people familiar with St. Bernard know him as the 12th Century intellectual arch-rival of Abelard, the brilliant scholar whose love of the famous Heloise was rather drastically severed by her uncle. One day, in his spare time, Drainville would like to write a book about this political side of St. Bernard. (At times Drainville's hair cut makes him look not unlike a 12th Century monk.)

At Trinity, Drainville was inspired by Howard Hewlett-Clark, the once primate of Trinity. "He was a wonderful man, saintly, with a great sense of humour, and he helped by answering the questions of a very inquisitive boy."

Like St. Bernard, however, Drainville's political drive was still strong within him. In the 1977 provincial election, he decided to run as a Liberal in the Riverdale riding, "knowing I was a dead duck." He was also only 23.

In 1975, the Liberals' showing in Riverdale was the worst in the province. When Drainville finished knocking on doors, he drove the popular vote up to 15 per cent, a vast improvement.

Describing how his loss affected him, however, Drainville starts with "I was a totally different person. I was 23 years old, very caught up in the political game and I thought very highly of myself. I really had no sense of reality about my own life. Outwardly I was articulate and understood the issues. Inwardly I was immature, I had no knowledge of suffering. I had no context in which to represent people's needs and aspirations."

"It would have been a disaster for me and a disaster for them if I had won."

That's easy for him to say now. At the time, a combination of events in his personal life and the election defeat were a stunning blow to his sense of self. As he studied for priesthood, he went through an intense period of self-examination and, eventually, renewal.

Once again, though, this internal discovery coincided with other activities. Following the election, Drainville took a serious look at where the Liberals seemed to be heading. "I had concerns about the progress of the parliamentary form of government in Ottawa," he says in a clipped way, adding he could spend another two hours elaborating on this subject alone.

Trudeau's Bill 75 about closure and debates bothered Drainville's sense of government responsibility immensely. "These changes weren't democratic, they weren't making parliament more responsive to the people."

The move to give more power to the Prime Minister's Office and Privy Council were "consolidated by Mr. Mulroney", a man for whom Drainville has few kind words.

In 1978, Drainville cut his ties with the Liberal Party. At the same time he got a phone call from Ottawa, saying he had just been chosen as the riding's returning officer.

This meant working closely with Riverdale's Member of Parliament, a young intellectual named Bob Rae. "He and I got along quite well. I took on my role in a non-partisan way. I was as fair to the Marxist-Leninists as I was to the Libertarians and Rhinoceros Party."

Around this time, Drainville met a young woman who would also later graduate from Trinity. Drainville and Donna Quance were friends for a few years. "I began asking her to marry me and she said no all the time." They parted ways and he began dating other women. "All of a sudden, I was in the midst of a conversation with another woman when I realized I was totally bored. 'What am I doing here,' I asked myself. 'I don't want anyone else but Donna.'"

"The next day I went out to a jewellery shop and bought a ring, a pearl with eight diamonds because I knew Donna loved pearls. I phoned her up and said 'Met me at the subway on your way home.' As we were walking down the street, I said 'By the way, I just bought a little something for you.' She looked at the ring and asked 'What does this mean?' 'You know what it means.' 'Well, it's really nice, very beautiful' — I knew the pearl was the right choice. By the time we got to the door of her home I said 'What do you say.' She said, 'I think it's time. Yes.'"

That was November of 1981 and they married the following July, just after he was ordained.

His first parish was north of Kingston in Land o' Lakes, a small community whose name was more idyllic than its circumstances. "It was a poor parish with many different kinds of problems, such as high unemployment. It brought me into contact with concerns that had always been inside of me — why is it that so many have so little when others have so much? I wanted to be engaged in the issues."

He got that opportunity as director of Stop 103, a food bank and multi-service agency in the basement of St. Stephen's in the Fields at College near Spadina in Toronto. Now his congregation, transient as it sometimes was, included the unemployed, sole support mothers, natives, drug abusers, alcoholics and prostitutes — "any person who needed help and didn't have anywhere else to go."

"My questions become more acute," Drainville says. "How is wealth administered? Why are people hungry and why are people poor? I could neither be happy with the way society was functioning nor with the role of government in that society. I began to write articles and eventually, Poverty in Canada. This put me in contact with the media and I began to work on the national front."

People who have no local context for Drainville might have seen or heard him several times on Morningside, the Journal, Canada AM and Mid-day.

"It was all very exciting. With the battery of lights and cameras and microphones, you realize your every word and movement is being recorded." Did he once again shake hands with the ego he had striven to overcome? "I was so committed to the cause, my concerns were more 'How to I utilize this opportunity?' rather than getting any ego pleasure out of it."

A funny thing did begin to happen, however. He realized he could manipulate the manipulators. "The way we're doing this interview now is not the way they do it in Toronto. You have a 15 minute interview and 15 seconds gets on the air. It got so that I could say precisely what I knew would be on tv, and what facial expressions to use."

"The reality was Dennis Drainville was becoming a figurehead and the issue was being lost. I had done as much as I could do, so I stepped aside. I knew I had to get the hell out. God help you if you cannot then go on and do something else."

Not only was he becoming too much of a media personality, but it's exhausting facing poverty day in, day out. He doesn't glorify poverty as the Bible sometimes does; he recognizes the depression and degradation it brings to people's lives.

"One of the things I was always uncomfortable with as a priest was realizing how platitudinous our attitude to the poor was. There's more understanding now, but that doesn't mean the church can't stop learning. For good or ill, the church does mirror society."

Campaigning with now-Premier Bob Rae this summer

In public, Drainville does not call upon God to solve the problems or to be the final arbitrator as many others do. "God isn't Conservative. Neither is God a radical nor a leftist. I don't think that's the way God operates." Solving the poverty crisis is society's job.

Before realizing he wanted to be part of a government which spurred society to do just that, Drainville went to Montreal "to set up some urban ministries in the downtown core." He was also part-time chaplain at McGill University.

This was a good time in his life because "it brought me back into contact with my father," whom he had seen sporadically over the years. His Montreal work finished, he wanted to come back to Toronto Diocese, either once again working in the heart of a city, or in the country. The people of Fenelon Falls and Cobocok welcomed him into their parish. (Later he would be Regional Dean.)

Sickness put an end to that enjoyable part of his life and they moved up to Haliburton so he could recuperate.

"We really have grown to love the place," says

Drainville, although they are now building so they can have a house with running water. "We find it a very restful place and we feel nourished being here."

He used this nourishment to help him tackle his next project: becoming the Victoria/Haliburton MPP.

"I'm a driven person, there's no question on that," he says of his decision. "Some say I'm driven because of my wanting to help people. I do care deeply. I tend to be like a very typical caregiver, calling on my own woundedness as an individual and wanting to protect others from being wounded."

By 1990, Drainville had those life experiences he felt were necessary to be an honest representative of people who were often going through their own struggles. Like one of those Shakespearean characters he once yearned to play, he emerged from his own search of self with a greater understanding of life's pleasures and pains. King Lear behind him, he has another role to fulfill: the people who suffer the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune need his voice at Queen's Park.

So now you know.

Call of the wild

There were no lions and bears in Wilberforce, but how about BIG snakes and felines

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

HAVE YOU EVER had a boa constrictor wrap itself around your neck? If not, you should have been at the Lloyd Watson Centre in Wilberforce last week.

Students from Gooderham, Cardiff and Wilberforce schools not only had the chance to wear the snake, but managed to pet a cougar as well.

The animals were provided courtesy of Speaking of Wildlife, a animal preservation group based in Fraserville. For ninety minutes two hosts of the group spoke to the students about endangered animals and the ways man can protect them.

Between their discussions they introduced the kids to some very special guests. First to take to centre stage was "Chico", a large cockatoo parrot.

As Wildlife's Scott Armstrong spoke about

Chico's nesting habits, he called for a volunteer from the audience to act as a tree and let Chico sit on their arm.

Next up was "Chuckles", a red-tail boa constrictor who was carried out hidden in a brown sack.

"I bet it's a snake," could be heard coming from the crowd, even before Armstrong could get Chuckles out of the bag.

The children's suspicions were confirmed and Armstrong then asked for three volunteers. Without hesitation every small hand in the room went up, unlike the attending teachers and parents, who were sure to keep their hands close by their sides.

"We haven't feed Chuckles in a week," joked Armstrong as he set his volunteers, Karl Klapow, Jessie Rogers and Leifa Blakely, in a straight row. One by one, each of the kids had Chuckles draped around their necks to form a living necklace.

Much to their surprise they discovered that

Can we keep him? Those brave volunteer handlers are holding "Horack", a 14 foot python that can swallow just about anything he wants. Standing from left to right: Handler Tony Lynn, Diane Withey, Jim Hopkins, Darlene Hill, Pat Clark and Audrey Chambers.

Meet "Amber" the cougar, one of the star attractions of 'Speaking of Wildlife', owned by Scott Armstrong, left, assisted by Tony Lynn, right.

Chuckles was not "slimy", but really quite dry and very warm.

The next visit was by a small, monkey-like animal called a kiakajou, or "honey bear". This very skittish animal, native to the South American rain forest, had been illegally smuggled into Canada stuffed behind a car door panel.

Instead of letting him be sold as an exotic pet, a concerned Samaritan bought him and donated him to Speaking of Wildlife.

"Yoda", as he was called, could only stay in front of the audience a few minutes before being returned to his cage. But he delighted the children by hanging by his tail from Armstrong's arm.

After Yoda was gone, "Amber" the cougar was led on stage. The handlers gave a brief talk about Amber's past and then it was time to pick more volunteers. This time teacher Darlene Hill and Cardiff student Nicole Ostroskie were chosen to come up and pet the playful cat who purred her appreciation.

Then Armstrong said "We saved the best for last" and asked for five teachers to come to the front. Showing only the slightest ounce of apprehension, the five brave volunteers made their way past the excited children.

"Please hold out your hands," asked Armstrong as he lined them up in a straight row. After setting up his "volunteers", Armstrong and assistant Tony Lynn disappeared behind the curtain.

Minutes later they returned carrying "Korack", a 14 foot python which they draped across the open hands of the five volunteers.

The children let out gasps as Armstrong nonchalantly explained how Korack unhinges his jaw to consume food. "He can make his mouth wide enough to eat a German Shepherd," says Armstrong. The kids loved it.

"I think I would prefer a cute puppy or a hamster as a pet," said Darlene Hill, after Korack was taken off her hands and put safely back behind bars.

As the children were guided out after the presentation, they were invited to give Korack a pat. All of them did.

But this was only the first show of the day for Speaking of Wildlife. Another roomful of kids waits near Peterborough.

"I love seeing the impact on kids faces," says Lynn. He is a recent graduate of Sir Sandford Fleming who joined Wildlife in May.

"I have always had an interest in animals and there isn't too many organizations like this around to step into."

Speaking of Wildlife was started three years ago by Armstrong after he graduated from university with an MBA. "I found business to be too boring."

Most of Wildlife's animals are "cast-offs", animals that have been confiscated and who were mistreated. Yoda's example, another is Amber.

The cougar was taken by the police after she was found living in the apartment of a Toronto drug dealer.

To the 100 or so children who came to the centre, the wilds of the jungle came to life in a way which sure beats television's Wild Kingdom.

HAVE gets helping hand from students

by BRIAN RODNICK
Staff Reporter

JACK AND JILL went up the hill and what they found there will come as a surprise to everyone Saturday night at HAVE's annual fundraising concert.

The tale of Jack and Jill is only one nursery rhyme that Sharon Harrison's enrichment class at J. Douglas Hodgson Elementary School will be offering. Each will have a surprise ending that will not only amuse the audience, but inform them as well.

"The organizers of HAVE wanted variety," says Harrison. "They knew I liked to get my kids involved."

Another fairy tale gone wrong will be the classic The Three Little Pigs. Harrison and her students refuse to give away the ending, but assure us that by the time their skit is over, our attitude towards the wolf will be changed.

Harrison's class is only one of several that will be performing at Saturday's concert. Students from Grades 5, 6, and 7 all have something planned.

The money collected at this year's HAVE concert will go towards providing some much-needed school supplies to fight illiteracy in The Gambia, West Africa.

The destitute country's needs were brought to HAVE's attention by Clarence McInerney of Minden.

McInerney, who taught for close to 33 years, first learned of the plight of the African students in 1985. At that time he was a volunteer teacher for the Canadian Teaching Foundation and was sent to The Gambia.

But when he returned as a team leader in 1989, he learned that the education problems had worsened. Only 10 per cent of the population can read.

Part of this problem is due to the lack of education tools, such as work books, black boards, and even chalk. On the average, McInerney said 60 to 65 students in a primary one class must share only 10 readers.

"The only thing that can be done is to make sure that they have school supplies," he says.

But that money is also needed to assist Gambian teachers change their teaching methods to utilize the school supplies effectively.

Since returning from Africa in May of 1989, McInerney has raised close to $40,000 in donations and grants, not including the money that will be raised by the HAVE concert.

He says it costs only $740 to supply one teacher and 50 pupils with all the school supplies they will need for one year, one tenth of the price that it costs to educate one child in Haliburton County.

"I think it is a really modest amount."

But illiteracy is only one of the problems that face the people in The Gambia; malnutrition and sickness are others.

"If they haven't got any water they can't grow gardens or look after their livestock," said McInerney.

McInerney managed to have four wells dug in 1989 and has had two more dug this year. Plans are under way to dig two more. He said clean water will be a big help because at least 20 per cent of the children die before the age of five due to starvation and dysentery.

McInerney and his wife return to The Gambia next month and will stay for three months. They are paying all their costs themselves since 100 per cent of HAVE donations are put to work for people in less fortunate countries.

Concert helps kids in Africa

H.A.V.E. is a small charity operating on the grass roots level out of Haliburton County. Since 1983 it has concentrated on water-related, health, and educational projects in India, Nicaragua, and the Gambia. They have to date drilled 85 wells constructed a water pipeline in the Himalayan foothills, and a rural health clinic in the Hyderabad area of India.

H.A.V.E. mandate is to help the poorest of the poor in the third world. In all cases, we have had on-site inspection by project officers who have travelled at their own expense. H.A.V.E. is recognized as a charity by the Government of Canada and all donations are thus tax deductible. We are also registered with the Canadian International Development Agency as a Non-Governmental Organization and receive matching funding on selected projects up to a 3 to 1 basis. Apart from C.I.D.A., H.A.V.E.'s funding relies on three major sources: donations by individuals, an annual "Walk for Water" held each June, and a fall Haliburton Artist's Variety Evening.

This variety evening will take place on Saturday, November 3, 7:30 p.m., at the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School auditorium. The concert will feature local musicians and groups: "Previous Friends" with Dianne Hagerman and Janice Benoit; "Harmony", a six voice group sharing songs of faith and inspiration; Gord Kidd and Karen Davey; Edward Moll; and other special guests.

Any donations raised during the course of the concert will be going toward upgrading Primary one (first year education) in the Gambia, a small country in West Africa. The Gambia is one of the poorest countries in the world. At present, most Gambian children advance to the higher grades with little knowledge of written English, their national language, and remain for the most part illiterate.

A retired Haliburton teacher, Clarence McInerney, has given generously of his own time and money to improve the profoundly inadequate educational infrastructure in the Gambia. Money raised for the Gambia will go primarily for basic school supplies.

H.A.V.E. members meet once each month to discuss new projects and review the progress of ongoing ones. All members are volunteers who serve without reimbursement and the only administrative costs involve the services of an accountant to provide the required annual audits. As C.I.D.A. provides funds for administrative expenses we can guarantee that 100 per cent of all our funds raised are spent overseas on projects.

We are always looking for new members who share our belief in world unity and the family of humanity, and who are willing to translate this belief into action.

Families brought together over super spaghetti supper

DORSET NEWS

by: PHYLLIS BRISCOE

The Dorset Senior Club enjoyed a morning of bowling at the Carnarvon Bowling Lanes last Wednesday. Afterwards they crossed over to the Boathouse for a delicious lunch. An enjoyable time for all.

To-night is the Halloween party at the club. As well as an array of costumes there will be a Vegas Night for fun.

On Wednesday, Nov. 6th, a penny sale is being planned. Everyone brings a white elephant, baked goods or any article you wish to donate and it will be displayed. Strictly a fun game.

The meetings from now on will be in the afternoon, beginning at 1:30 p.m. This change of time begins with the penny sale on Nov. 6th.

If you missed the Spaghetti Supper on Oct. 20 to bad. It was great and well attended with many of the younger set there with their children. It's gratifying to have functions where families can enjoy them together. Hats off to the chef who produced a sauce that was scrumptious and included lots of goodies, fresh mushrooms, oddies of meat, fresh red peppers plus other odds and ends and well seasoned. An inexpensive way to enjoy a good supper and no dishes to wash. This was a fund raising effort of the Community Centre committee; we hope they made a profit.

A lovely luncheon was enjoyed at the Cedar Narrows Restaurant on Friday, Oct. 19th, under the auspices of the Haliburton County Home Support Services. It was well attended with 49 present; 13 were members of the Dorset Senior Club.

After the members and guests had replenished their energy with food they were treated to a very informative and interesting session. The meeting was opened by Donna Pacey, Executive Director of H.C.H.S.S. who welcomed those present and was enthusiastic in her praise of work done by volunteers. Donna introduced the President of the Haliburton Home Support Services, Adele Barnes, who explained the many different services provided by the organization. The Guest Speaker, Ray Selbie, attorney from Haliburton, was introduced by Past-President, Helen Handerson. Ray spoke on the importance of having a will, regardless of the amount of your estate, the law regarding power-of attorney. The problems that can arise if one suddenly becomes mentally incompetent and other legal points of interest. Apparently, there have been many new laws passed on the various subjects in recent years. There was a question and answer period and many possible situations were cleared up. The speaker was thanked by Mary Johnson who coordinates the services in this area.

Intended for last week

A lovely wedding took place at Knox United Church, Dorset, on Sept. 22nd, when Linda Clark, daughter of Wm. and Barbara Clark of Dorset, and Randy Keown, son of Ken and Dorothy Keown of Port Cunningham, were married. The Maid of Honour was the bride's cousin, Charlotte Treadwell of Toronto. The bridesmaids were the bride's sister and Godmother: Donna Katz of Whitby and Judy May, of Huntsville.

Junior bridesmaids were the bride's nieces, Beth and Diana Katz of Whitby. The ring bearer was "great" niece of the groom, Melissa LeMay of Huntsville. The best man, cousin of the groom, was Ken Cunningham of Dwight. Ushers were Mike LeMay of Huntsville and Harvey Kading of Woodstock. The junior ushers were the bride's nephew Steven Gossen and Derek LeMay of Huntsville.

The bride was beautiful in a Victorian style dress of white satin, complete with veil and train. Her attendants were lovely with dresses in teal blue. Despite rain and wind the wedding party boarded the Lumine Launch for an exciting ride to Lumina Resort where the wedding reception was held. Those attending the event were friends and relatives from Pontypool, Whitby, Woodstock, Toronto, California, London, Pavasson, Mitchell, Dwight and Dorset.

The happy couple spent their honeymoon touring with time spent at Wasaga Beach, Woodstock and Niagara Falls. Randy and Linda will reside at their home in Dwight.

Stan and Ellen Booker had a nice visit with their daughter Lynda, having spent the Thanksgiving week-end with her at her home in Cobourg.

Dorset now has a Beaver colony. This program is offered to boys from 2 to 7 years of age and is the start of the Scouting program. Any parents who would like to enroll their boys in the Beavers are welcome to attend and bring their boys to the meeting on Monday evenings at 5:30 at the Dorset Recreation Centre. Their leaders will be Laurie Kent and Ruth Ross.

TOPS (Taking Off Pounds Sensibly) is again meeting for another year. They met on Thursday night at 7:00 p.m.

There will be a Youth Program at the Centre every Tuesday and Thursday from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. There will be organized sports, art, crafts and games for children 9 to 16 years of age. There is no charge for members; non-members pay $2.00 for each afternoon.

DENNYS/BURK WEDDING: On October 13th, 1990, Sharlene Louise Dennys was joined in marriage to Ronald Jack Burk. The marriage took place in Haliburton United Church with the reception following at the PineStone Inn.

WEST GUILFORD NEWS

First of all, I must make a correction, giving credit where credit is due: Dan Chumbley is the son of Val and Ken Chumbley, instead of as printed a week ago.

On Saturday a number of Highlands Little Theatre people got together at the Centre for instruction in the form of a workshop under Renee Baillargeon of Oakville. This director and teacher of mime, dance, ballet, and movement is also a writer and actress herself. She has appeared many times on stage in French and English drama.

Debra Dart, Glen Carter, Irene Lubowitz, Shelley van Nood, Heather Sculley, Doug Brohm, Chris Lynd, Bonnie Fitzgerald, Falina Pierson, and myself. We were led through some exercises, taught how to portray emotion and how to stand and move appropriately on stage. There was an amazing amount packed into the hours which made the day well worthwhile. Thanks to H.L.T. executive for setting this up for us.

Aerobics classes are now offered (from The Family YMCA on Lindsay) at the Centre on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays. It's Low Impact Aerobics from 5:45-6:45 on the three days until Dec. 31 and open to all ages. Call Libby, 754-4430 for details.

Murray Scott and Cecelia had an eight day bus trip to Pigeon Forge and Gatlin Brooke Tennessee. Spent a day at Dollywood Park and had a bus tour of the Smokey Mountains. Heard and saw lots of country music and shows.

Mrs. Dan MacKenzie had surgery on Oct. 22nd in Toronto East General Hospital. She was home on the 28th and is making a satisfactory recovery.

Smoking:

a major heartbreaker

You've probably heard a lot about the benefits of quitting smoking. Smoking is a very serious risk to your health, and to the health of people around you. In fact, it's getting harder to smoke. New laws are coming into effect that will limit when and where you can smoke.

There are many good reasons to quit smoking, but quitting can be hard to do.

Winning the battle against smoking takes a lot of effort, but the benefits from quitting are well worth it. You:

- ♥ reduce the risk of heart disease, stroke, lung cancer and other lung diseases.
- ♥ reduce the health risk to the people around you -- your family, friends and co-workers, who are exposed to second-hand smoke.
- ♥ have fresher breath, and your clothes, car, and home won't smell of cigarette smoke.
- ♥ save lots of money!

You can join the almost 5 million Canadians who have quit. Start planning to quit now!

QUALITY

ISO KERN has been producing high quality chimneys, fireplaces, and chimney relining for over 50 years, using technology considered advanced even by today's standards.

The material is the finest pumice in the world, obtained from the volcano, Hekla, in Iceland. After being shipped to Denmark, it is processed in ISO KERN'S refining plant and laboratory -- one of the largest in Europe. This method is completely computerized and quality control is carried out daily on both materials and the finished product.

INSTALLATION

ISO KERN has produced a chimney and fireplace that provide you with all the benefits of a masonry fireplace, but can be installed in approximately one-third of the time and still give you the freedom of a custom-made fireplace to express your own individual style.

EFFECTIVENESS AND SAFETY

The materials ISO KERN uses are naturally produced from a volcano in Iceland, called Hekla. Once refined, it is the most fireproof substance known to the building industry.

In recent tests, a 4" thick pumice withstood heating on one side to a temperature of 3,000 Fahrenheit for 60 minutes, while the other side only reached a temperature of 85 Fahrenheit. Therefore, instantly reflecting heat into a room, instead of having to absorb the heat before reflecting it.

The materials and construction of the ISO KERN chimney and fireplace make them 60% more fire resistant than any other on the market, either hand or mass produced.

We at ISO KERN believe this demonstrates ISO KERN'S commitment not only to producing a more effective fireplace, but to constantly striving to make ISO KERN'S fireplace the safest in the world.

Bagpiper's music always liked

WILBERFORCE NEWS

by: WINNIE SCHOFIELD

You don't have to have the blood of a Scot coursing through your veins to thrill to the sound of the bagpipes. The hills of Haliburton provide the right setting. Over the years we have loved the music and the swinging kilts of the band when led by the commanding figure of William Booker. We marvelled at his control of movement of his troop with a flourish of his mighty baton. Now it is a great loss to all who dwell here that William Booker died suddenly at his home at Highland Creek on Sunday Oct. 21st.

Mr. Booker was the former Drum Major of the 48th Highlanders and was Drum Major of the Scarborough Pipe Band. He had a home on the Grace River Road and was a member of our Legion. Representing Wilberforce Branch 648, Pat^{re} Gallen and Andy Taylor attended the Large funeral that took place in Toronto. William Booker was buried in Springhill Cemetery, Toronto.

Those interested in Figure Skating can register for the coming season on Sat. November 3rd at the Lloyd Watson Centre from 10 to 12 a.m. A table will be set up in the lounge. President of the Club is Shirley Finlay with Cathy De Carlo acting as secretary/treasurer. Fees will be $35. for beginners and $40. for seniors. A new Figure Skating teacher is Angela Bilodau from West Guilford. Ice in the arena will be ready for first night of skating that takes place Nov. 7th at 6:30 p.m.

A letter from Trail, B.C. is from Arnold White who visited Wilberforce in August in search of information about his ancestors. Mr. White, delighted with the success of his mission, expressed gratitude for help given by Randall McCrea, Mrs. Noble and Hilda Clark. He was able to locate the headstone of his great-grandfather William Burton in the South Wilberforce cemetery and those of Wm. Burton's son, daughter and daughter-in-law. They had died between 1879 and 1896. The registry office in Minden supplied information about property in the Burton family. He appreciated also help given by Mr. and Mrs. Tommy Dovell of Gooderham who remembered details about James White, another relative. The Monmouth Township book was of great value in his research and he ordered copies for relatives. Mr. White is just one of many who through the years have come seeking information about their early ancestors.

You may never again see a better bargain than this one. On November 3rd, in the basement of St. Margaret's Church, you have on hand from 10 to 11 a.m. to pick up good used clothing at no cost. All is free. Plenty of good garments available. Better bring your own container.

Wilberforce Minor Hockey League members have encountered difficulties in getting games underway. New equipment had to be installed at the Arena which held up ice making and this forced the League to rent ice practice time at Bancroft and Haliburton for the teams. First of their games played resulted in the following: Novice—Bancroft 3, Wilberforce 2; Atom—Bancroft 1, Wilberforce 2; and PeeWee—Bancroft 8, Wilberforce 6. All good games. We can be proud of our teams' showing. Waiting in the wings are a good number of tyke-aged youngsters who will be organized in the future.

The Minor Hockey League held a Halloween dance on Saturday night at the Lloyd Watson Centre. The good attendance was encouraging. Prizes distributed for best costumes were tickets for the New Year's Dance.

The funeral to take place Thursday morning, October 25, I, for one, will miss the lamp in her window. Sympathy is extended to all her nieces, nephews, all other family members and her many friends.

Another accident recently, on County Road 9 and 21 sent one driver and two children who were her passengers to hospital in serious condition.

Some 150 to 200 geese were not only seen but heard, headed over Moore Lake on Saturday, October 20. The following is from Their family would like to invite friends and neighbours to help celebrate their very special day by stopping by with "best wishes only please" at the Cobocok Legion Hall from 2:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. and later a dance beginning about 8:00 p.m. on Saturday, November 17. Many the two of you have many more great years together.

Some thirty-five Norland Area Seniors sat down to a delicious pot luck dinner on Thursday, October 18 at Norland Community Hall followed by card games. A great time was had by all.

Don't forget the Norland Seniors Bazaar/Bake Sale at the Community Hall on Saturday, November 3 from 104 p.m.

Many important dates to mark

WILBERFORCE LEGION

by: ED SCOTT

Guests at Branch 624 general meeting on October 16, 1990 were Zone Commander Bob Hand and Mrs. Hand, Deputy Zone Commander North, Mike Crogham and Deputy Zone Commander South, Larry Craighead and Mrs. Craighead.

The following membership applications were approved: Associates Norma Walsh Bruce Weedon and Roy Blondin; Fraternal affiliates Bill Watson and Ivan Hadley. Welcome Comrades!

This may be our last column for the year, so we suggest you mark your calendar for the following dates:

Friday Nov. 9th and 16th: Turkey Rolls at Br. 624 at 7:45 p.m.

Sunday Nov. 11th:

Remembrance Day Church Parade at 9:00 a.m. at St. Margaret's Anglican Church, Wilberforce

Monday Nov. 12th: Remembrance Day ceremony will be held at 10:45 a.m. Members and friends should be at the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre prior to that time. If the weather is inclement, the service will be held indoors. Following this event, our Ladies' Auxiliary will provide another of their fine dinners at the Branch.

If you have not purchased your ticket for the satellite system supplied by Epsilon, the time is getting short and the tickets are getting scarce. The big draw is November 24th.

Our annual Wildlife Dinner will be held on Saturday, Dec. 1 commencing at 5 p.m. and continuing until 7 p.m. or until we run out of food, whichever comes first.

Membership Dues: If you are a "snowbird", please pay before you fly. Dues paid before December 1 qualify for the "Early Bird" sticker, and you save money. All fraternal affiliates MUST be paid by December 31st, ordinary and associate members by January 31st. Comrade Joyce Gillies, Poppy Fund Chairman of Br. 624 has submitted the following information regarding our Poppy Funds: "1989 amount collected $621.60; total cost of poppies, promotional materials, campaign expenses etc. $382.26; cost of wreaths $48.; disbursements $453.05."

The Royal Canadian Legion Poppy-Remembrance campaign begins the last week of October. The poppy serves to remind us of the 114,000 Canadian men and women who made the supreme sacrifice in two World Wars and Korea. In 1989 a total of $5.9-million was raised by the sale of poppies. This money is used to promote health and well-being of ex-service members and their dependents

Heating in the Winter.
Air Conditioning in the Summer. It's all there, right under our Feet.

If you want to reduce your electric heating bill, look down at your feet. Now look a few feet further. Look at the earth itself. It could be your next source of heating and air conditioning.

Ground source heat pumps are designed to draw heat from the earth and pump it into your home. In the summer, the ground source heat pump reverses its operation. It extracts heat and humidity from your home and pumps it into the earth. The excess heat can also be used to heat domestic hot water or swimming pools and hot tubs.

This is truly the cleanest most efficient way to heat and air condition your home. And while ground source heat pumps cost more than traditional furnaces and air conditioners they soon pay for themselves with savings. That's why today's progressive home builders and renovators are specifying them for their clients.

Call us for more information about ground source heat pumps. You'll see that one of the most advanced technologies in heating and cooling is as old as the earth itself.

COMMUNITY NEWS

Festival's return to be voted on

by: MABEL BRANNIGAN

All members are invited to exercise their right to vote at the general meeting on November 1, 1990, at 8:00 p.m. as to whether or not Branch 129 will sponsor the Bluegrass Festival in 1991. Voting will be by secret ballot. If you wish further information regarding financial status of past events, how the several problems will be addressed for the 1991 event, if it is held, or if you have other concerns, please contact Chairman of Finance and First Vice President Walter Chambers at 457-1430 or President Mabel at 489-2784.

Cde. Bill Juby will be hosting a group of seniors on November 18 to the Orangeville horse races. This will be an exciting trip with a box seat and a buffet. A comfortable bus is reserved, and this will probably be the last trip this year. Don't miss out. Book your seat today.

Your Branch is known for catering to the Seniors of the community, and we are going to try something new. On November 22, at 4:30 p.m., we will host a social time and luncheon for all Legion and Community seniors over 55 years of age. If these luncheons are successful, and there is every indication they will be, we will host these on a monthly basis with no charge to seniors. On November 24, we will host 48 guests from Kinmount who will spend an hour of comradeship with our members.

Branch members are looking forward to spending November 9 with the youth in the Community by attending all schools. Cde. David Sturtevant will be conducting this assisted by Cde. Grenville Draper and the colour party. Somehow, Cde. Jack Bassett will elicit from these children the singing of O Canada with the gusto and pride that we have not heard in years. It has leaked out that the Victoria School Children have composed "The Poppy Song", and with the help of Bill Gliddon, they will sing it on November 9 for their visitors.

All members are invited to the Memorial Service at the Cairn in Minden on November 4 at 2:30 p.m. Our Memorial Service will be at 10:00 a.m. in the Legion hall on Saturday, November 10. The wreath laying ceremony will be at 11:00 at the cenotaph. The Veterans' dinner and the Honours and Awards program will be held in the evening. Your committee has put forth much effort to make this a great day. The Ladies Auxiliary will be serving sandwiches and coffee after the parade. The Branch gratefully acknowledges a donation from the Ladies Auxiliary of $2,000. The Ladies worked hard and long hours at their Bluegrass booth to earn this amount. In addition to this, the items at their craft booth were made and donated by a group of the ladies. The proceeds were given to the Building Fund. These ladies are few in number, but they must be the envy of volunteer organizations everywhere.

Cde. Zone Commander Ken Bell will do his annual inspection on Thursday, November 1 at the Branch. Clubroom entertainment continues every Saturday night with the Pickard family playing on November 3.

Community mourns

COBOCONK NEWS

by: SHEILA LAKE

The Community was shocked and very saddened to learn of the tragic death of Lillie Smith on Monday afternoon. Lillie was struck down and killed when a motorist heading north struck her as she crossed Highway 35 to get her mail from the mail box. She was a truly regal lady. I had enjoyed a visit with her a short time ago, and she proudly showed me her new cats, kittens actually, that her handyman, Bill Cochran had got for her, when her old cat had to be put to sleep. A resident here for many, many years, I believe she and her late husband, Bert, built the motel across the road from per present home. Sincere sympathy to her nephew and nieces. She was a very dear lady.

The Coboconk New Horizon Seniors are holding a Fall Bazaar on Sat. Nov. 3rd from 1-4 p.m. in the Coby Community Hall. There will be crafts, baked goods — just a whole lot of goodies so do call and see for yourself.

The Coby Seniors will hold their Christmas party and dinner at the Legion hall on Nov. 28th. There will be entertainment at 2 p.m. followed by the annual meeting, then a turkey dinner will be served. Keep the date in mind.

Pearl Bradimore has been ill with pneumonia and in Ross Memorial Hospital. Get well soon Pearl!

Rev. David Campbell and wife Laurie attended her grandfathers funeral at Norwood last week.

Dining room beautiful after renovations

SENIOR LEAGUE

by: WINNIFRED BARNUM

Hi, Senior League readers. This week started by having tea provided by the ladies of Haliburton's St. Anthony's Roman Catholic Church. The ladies served a delicious lunch which we all enjoyed. We thank Kathleen Brewer, Gena Salvatori, Cecelia Scott, Joan Hep- pelton, Eva O'Hara and Vittoria Formica.

Thursday evening two wives of Kinsmen came to call bingo, Marge Prentice and Daisy Downes. There were nine residents present and we spent a very nice evening. We certainly thank the ladies for com- ing.

At Happy Hour Doris played the piano and the residents and friends joined in with singing. The afternoon passed by with everyone enjoying themselves.

Saturday Oct. 20, Mary and Lucy Burgess were visited by Alice Harrison, Betty Morrow, and Kay England. These ladies had motored up from Burl- ington to spend a short time with Lucy and Mary. They had been members of Calvary Baptist Church, Burlington.

Saturday, Stan Griffith came to play the piano. He played steady for one and a half hours, anything he could think of. His style is so different from other piano players who have been here. They all are en- joyable. How he keeps his fingers from being all tangled up I don't know. We thank Stan for a happy afternoon, and appreciate it greatly.

Chapel service was held by Rev. John Burgess, and Alice Jones accompanied the hymn on the organ. We sincerely thank Alice and Rev. Burgess for a comfort- ing service.

Monday we had fun and fitness, foot massage and reading, our usual routine, with Tom McAllister showing movies: "A Tale of Two Critters" about a cub bear and young rac- coon who were up a rotting tree. The mother bear pushed the tree over into the rapids of a river. They floated down the river on the old tree. They finally landed on shore, and they shared a summer and winter as pals. I enjoyed the movie, and think those who attended did also. Thank you Tom.

Tuesday's Chapel ser- vice was conducted by Rev. Dawn Gilby of Kinmount Anglican Church. It has been sometime since Rev. Gilby has been able to con- duct this service, and we thank her and are glad she could come today. We also thank Ruth Gorrie for play- ing the organ this morning.

Congratulations to Bob Mitchell. His birthday was Oct. 22, and to Margaret Robinson whose birthday was October 23. Best wishes to you both.

Tuesday afternoon Doris took us for a bus ride. She went up the old Bob- caygeon road to Queen's line, along this to Vankoughnet Road, out to Highway 35 and after shop- ping at Kawartha Dairy we arrived home shortly before 3 o'clock. It was a beautiful day, just perfect for a drive in the country.

Wednesday morning the main dining room was given a face lift. The tables all have new table cloths and place mats. The cloths are a rose pink and the mats are a deeper colour than the table cloths. The tables were rearranged. Because we have so many wheelchairs we could hard- ly get through before. With the new drapes, table cloths, mats, and pictures it is a beautiful change for us.

Wednesday afternoon Ruth Ward, her niece and husband came to visit Vera Archer, and I had a short visit with her. We went to high school together in Haliburton.

Village's best wishes offered to newlyweds

CARNARVON NEWS

The November meeting of the U.C.W. will be held on Wednesday afternoon at the C.E. Building, November 7th, at 12:00 noon. All ladies welcome. Bring a bag lunch.

Mrs. Annie Stark, for- mally Minaker, passed away last week after being in a nursing home for some time. Burial was last Fri- day. Our sympathies to the family.

We were sorry to learn a relative of Velda Harrison was killed in a motorcycle accident around Leam- ington along with another young man. They were both in their early twenties. Our condolences.

Joan Fennell and Fred Chapple exchanged wed- ding vows on Saturday Oc- tober 27th in Zion United Church. Rev. Jack Spencey officiated in- cluding many special touches. Perhaps the most special was the ringbearer, 2-1/2-year-old Scott Fen- nell, grandson of the bride, formally attired in a black Tuxedo with "Tails". The ring pillow was a Teddy Bear also in Tuxedo created by Melissa Stephens. The bride was attended by her two sons, Mark and David Fennel; the groomsmen were Fred's two sons, Richard and Stephen Chap- ple. The Choir added a special touch singing Largo, The Lord's Prayer, and a theme from Ice Castles. Following the ser- vice guests were invited to Loch Haven for dinner and a very lively dance.

The Community wishes them a very happy Honey- moon in Mexico and a long and loving life together. Some of the out of town guests were Fred Gregory of Ottawa, brother of the bride, Mrs. Bertha Parker of Scarborough and Eleanor Smith and family, sister to the groom.

In memory of ALFRED McCOLL. You taught me how to stand on my own. And when I thought you expected too much I now see it was the loving touch. For in those expectations I found I would End up achieving the best I could. But mostly, do you know the pride I've had Being able to say "that's my Dad." Love always, Sylvia. 32-CA-31

In loving memory of our grandmother LILLIAN DUGAN who passed away March, 23, 1989 and our grandfather WILLIAM DUGAN who passed away October 31, 1984. God giveth, and He taketh away. Both ours we could not keep. We've missed them more day to day. Since they entered into everlasting sleep. Lovingly remembered, Bill, Freda & family. 32-P-31

LOYD CONEYBEARE — In loving memory of a dear husband, father and grandfather who died Oct. 30, 1985. IN MEMORIAM

In memory of our dear daughter LAURA SUSAN ROWDEN. Nov. 10/76 Nov. 2/85. There is a family who misses you sadly And finds the time long since you went. And we think of you daily and hourly But try to be brave and content. But the tears that we shed in silence And we breathe a sigh of regret, For you were ours, and we remember, Though all the world forget. Love Mom, Dad, Derek & Sarah. 32-P-31

MADILL, CHRISTINA — In loving memory of a dear mother, grandma and great grandma who passed away Oct. 29, 1985. God gave us our mother, And he tried to be fair, And when he gave us ours, We got more than our share, Although he took her back, Five years ago today, We are so grateful For the years he let her stay, Gentle, unselfish, a friend over true; Our best possession, Mom, was you. For I loved you and miss you As it ends the second year. Lovingly remembered by wife Ruth. 32-P-31
